THE CRISIS IN CHINA

CHANGES IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Siege of Peking.

Empress Dowager Still Has Firm Control.

Scrambles for Trade Succeed Memories of Massacres.

Transformation in Legation Quarter—Chinese Officials Fear Collisions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Today is the anniversary of the beginning of the siege of the legations at Peking. Events that have happened during the year still leave the Empress Dowager with a firm grasp on affairs; her former generalissimo, Jung Lu, is in favor at court; Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang, who commanded the Chinese troops and ordered them to attack the foreigners, is scot free; Prince Tuan, chief criminal in the Boxer uprising, has received comparatively light punishment, and his son is still heir apparent to the throne.

The perils of last year, the plotting of the court, the outrages, the edicts ordering the extermination of foreigners, and the pandemonium caused by the Boxer uprising have been largely forgotten. The savage attacks on the various missions and massacres of innocent missionaries are ignored, while commercial schemes are given preeminence.

Still the legation quarter shows signs of transformation. The land on which the houses destroyed by the Boxers and Imperial troops were situated is now the site of the international barracks. The land where the leading Chinese bureau was located has now become the property of England and Russia, and the imperial ancestral hall is now the residence of Marquis Ruggi, the Italian Minister. The fortifications have been extended, and the Chinese are restricted, so far as entering the legation quarters is concerned, but no arrangement has been made as yet restricting the legation guard of foreign troops to that particular section pending the transfer of the administration of affairs to the Chinese.

Chinese officials are afraid that when the Chinese regulars arrive here, before the foreign troops withdraw from the various sections of the city, there will be collisions and troubles between the home and foreign soldiers. Since the French soldiers ceased to guard their section of the city there have been robberies, even in broad daylight. People are anxious about the future, as they see no plan as yet by which the Chinese propose tod control the bands of ruffians who are ready to rob and plunder when the foreign guards are withdrawn, before the Chinese are reinstated in control.

SMALL PLACES OCCUPIED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TIEN-TSIN, June 20.—Chinese troops, with the premission of the allied forces, are occupying several small places in the neighborhood of Yang Tsun, recently vacated by the foreign troops.

Gen. Lorne-Campbell says the delinquents in the recent difficulties between soldiers of the allies will be severely punished. Similar troubles are not likely to occur again.

Gen. Voyron, the French commander, has heartily coöperated with the British commander, and is determined, so far as the French are concerned, that order shall be maintained.

ORGANIZING REBELLION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, June 21.—A dispatch to the Standard from Shanghai announces that trustworthy reports say that Gen. Ting Hsiang is organizing a large body of veteran troops with the intention of raising a rebellion in the northwestern provinces of the Middle Kingdom.

GOTHAM LANDMARKS.

Citizens Propose to Have a Public Park on Historic Site of Old Fraunce's Tavern.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—At the latest meeting of the Board of Public Improvements a map and estimate were received from the City Engineer's bureau on the proposed park at Pearl and Broad streets, embracing the site of the historic Fraunce's Tavern, frequented by Washington and other revolutionary war heroes. The assessed valuation of the half block proposed for the park was reported to be $155,000, and the actual purchase price will probably be about twice that sum. The total cost of the park will be about $500,000. Representatives of the American Science and Historic Preservation Society and the woman's auxiliary, who started the park movement, and who were in attendance at the board meeting declared themselves gratified at the report.

President Coogan of the borough of Manhattan expressed himself as sanguine that the old tavern will be saved.

K. OF P. MEETING.

National Order Will Revise Its By-laws in Regard to Endowment Fund and Insurance Features.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, June 20.—The Tribune says that members of the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias from all parts of the United States and Canada will gather in Chicago, July 9, to attend a special session, the first assemblage of the kind called since the organization of the order.

The session will be held behind closed doors at the Lexington Hotel, and will probably continue for a week or more. The object is to adjust the investment of the endowment funds and provide for the growing needs of the insurance branch of the organization.

WASHINGTON

EUROPE'S HOSTILITY.

Evidences Coming to Light.

Crisis in Trade Now Looming Up.

Powers Apparently Intent Upon More Reciprocity.

Admiral Dewey Visits White House—Indians' Prayers Denied—Notes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By slow degrees the seriousness of the European trade situation that confronts the United States is dawning upon official minds in general at Washington, although, of course, it has long been understood by the members of the Cabinet.

It appears to be within the range of possibilities that Russian and Italian retaliation, on account of unratified reciprocity treaties, may be followed soon by some measure of retaliation on the part of one or two other countries, although information upon this point is still vague and confined to gossip heard among diplomatists, who, however, are very generally correct in the matter of advance information of this kind.

The intensity of European feeling on account of the failure of the United States to complete its reciprocity treaties is not comprehended in the United States. It is reported upon reliable authority that the principal reason for the recall of Baron Fava, Italian Ambassador to the United States, was the displeasure of the Italian government at what it considered his failure to have the Italian treaty signed by the Secretary of State and ratified by the American Senate, after it had been negotiated and approved by Italy.

The Italian government believed at the time that its representative at Washington had made a complete diplomatic failure in not completing this treaty. It did not understand the part the Senate played in the failure. Baron Fava was almost heartbroken over the incident, and made repeated attempts to rush the treaty to completion, but the State Department felt compelled to refuse to sign it while the Senate remained obdurate against all such treaties.

In regard to the Russian treaty, Count Cassini is said to have made a personal appeal to the President himself, when he found that the State Department would not sign it. At that interview the whole situation was explained to the Russian Ambassador, and since then he has exerted himself to prevent retaliation by his government, but the record of events shows how completely his friendly offices failed in that respect.

There is a report among diplomatists that France, too, may, upon the slightest pretext, impose higher tariffs upon American goods for the very reason that prompted both Russia and Italy to act. Reasonable provocation for such action by France has not yet occurred, but, of course, in the regular routine of customs service, it may occur any time. The fact that the time for ratification of the French treaty has for the second time been extended seems likely, however, to avert friction from this source.

It is understood that Hon. John A. Kasson, reciprocity commissioner, who has twice resigned his office, but whose resignation has not been accepted by the President, will, at an early day, return to his work in the State Department. His office there is still open, and a complete staff of clerks is on hand awaiting resumption of work. The clerks in the office say they do not know when Commissioner Kasson will return, but it is their general understanding that he will be back very soon.

GEN. CHAFFEE'S REPORT.

HOW CHINA WAS LOOTED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The report of Maj.-Gen. Chaffee on the campaign in China is being prepared for publication at the War Department. Among other matters it contains special reports upon the Russian, Japanese, French and British troops; also reports on equipment, supplies, etc., of foreign troops and reports on different expeditions. These reports were made by United States officers and from a military point of view are of considerable interest, but nearly all the main facts have heretofore been published.

Some of Gen. Chaffee's comments are interesting. At one point he says: "For about three weeks following the arrival of the relief column at Peking, the condition in and about the city, and along the line of communication was bad. Looting of the city, uncontrolled foraging in the surrounding country and seizure by soldiers of everything a Chinaman might have, as vegetables, eggs, chickens, sheep, cattle, etc., which were being brought into the city or found on the farms; indiscriminate and general unprovoked shooting of Chinese in city, country and along the line of march and the river—all this did not tend, as was natural, to gain for the troops the confidence of the masses, with whom it is certain we have no quarrel, but were in need of their labor. It is safe to say that where one real Boxer has been killed since the capture of Peking, fifty harmless coolies, or laborers on farms, including not a few women and children, have been slain. No doubt the Boxer element is largely mixed with the mass of population, and by slaying a lot, one or more Boxers might be taken in."

Gen. Chaffee speaks of the restraint he placed on American troops. The Japanese commander also made it known that general warring on all classes was not intended. Gen. Chaffee said he opposed entering the Forbidden City unless looting was prohibited. This was agreed to, and he thinks but little looting has been done there, though articles have been offered for sale said to have been taken from the Forbidden City.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—E. G. Tewksbury of the Congregational Missionary Society furnished Gen. Chaffee the following list of damages done by the Boxers to Chinese Christian adherents of the Congregational Mission as a basis of settlement:

Number of killed, 166; houses destroyed, 184; money, 16,150 taels; land formerly occupied by missions, 96 acres; chapels, 16; cemeteries, 30.

Maj. W. E. Craighill, reporting on the Russian soldiers, says: "The information gained of the Russian forces was meager and unsatisfactory. No reply was made by them to your request for a statement of the location and character of their force present in North China in accordance with the relief expedition."

He speaks of the excellent discipline of the Russian troops as follows: "They are industrious foragers; they used no tentage, but lived in huts made of native matting."

Maj. Charles H. Muir described the Japanese troops in detail and concluded by saying: "The Japanese soldier receives almost no pay, but is actuated by intense patriotism. If Japan can keep the armament and equipment on a par with her soldiers, she is a most formidable ally and a most formidable enemy."

Maj. W. E. Craighill also reports upon the French soldiers as to arms, supplies, etc., but his comments, like nearly all others, are omitted from the publication, being represented by rows of asterisks.

Lieut.-Col. Dickman reports upon the Germans. He says the German officers are well educated and the troops under good discipline.

The same officer reports on the British troops. He speaks of the painstaking detail in the mobilization and dispatching of the expeditionary forces. The discipline of the troops is excellent.

Maj. W. J. Bannister reports upon the medical departments of the allied armies. One interesting fact mentioned is that the British and Indian soldiers are not treated in the same field hospital, and separate hospitals are provided.

The Japanese and German medical departments are commended.

ABSOLUTE DENIAL.

NOT FORCING DENMARK.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—A complete denial is obtained at the State Department of the story emanating from a special correspondent in Copenhagen to the effect that the United States addressed a note to the Danish government recently relative to St. Thomas and St. Croix, demanding that the Danish government fortify the islands if they refuse to sell to the United States.

The State Department has no knowledge whatever on the subject for the last three months, and it never has contemplated making any such demand as that reported. The negotiations respecting the acquisition of the islands by the United States have progressed languidly, but in perfect good humor, through Mr. Swenson, and there is no reason to qualify the original expectation of the State Department that they will be concluded in season to permit of the submission to Congress of an annexation treaty some time next session.

The President and Mrs. McKinley Leave Early Next Month.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The announcement was made today that the President and Mrs. McKinley will leave Washington July 2d for their Canton home, to be gone two months. Mrs. McKinley continues to improve rapidly.

The President has definitely decided not to go to Cambridge to receive his degree from Harvard University. He has been informed that in consequence of his decision the degree will not be conferred on him this year, Harvard preferring to wait until next year, when, without doubt, he can honor the university with his presence.

SANTA FE HAS PLAN.

It is Working for Italian Settlers.

Wants a Colony in Southern California.

Texas and Other Western States Are Interested.

Agents Now in Rome Distributing Attractive Literature.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The management of the Santa Fé has begun to carry out a vast colonization plan which will result in bringing many thousand Italians to this country and locating them on lands in Southern California, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

The first step was taken when Chevalier J. Spanier was appointed general agent for the company with headquarters in Rome. Last week another agent was dispatched to Italy and carried with him nearly one hundred thousand books for distribution in various centers of the peninsula.

These books are in Italian, and plentifully illustrated with views taken from picturesque spots along the line of the Santa Fé in the States and Territories mentioned. Especial effort is to be made to colonize San Joaquin Valley, one of the most fertile grazing regions of the West. Until recently most of the land in this valley was held in large ranches, but it is now becoming cut up and it is possible to get small farms at reasonable rates.

The reading matter sent to Italy tells of advantages of farming in the San Joaquin Valley and also lays stress upon fruit land in Southern California.

LIVELY TIMES FOR SAN PEDRO FOLKS.

SHORT LINE HAS ON ITS FIGHTING GARMENTS.

Senator Clark and Associates Will Meet in Salt Lake City Shortly and Will Map Out a Programme Which Will Keep the Pot Boiling.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Conditions rapidly focusing in this city indicate the liveliest kind of a time here in the near future, between the San Pedro and Oregon Short Line companies. In fact, it has already begun, and important conferences will be frequently held during the next two weeks.

Hon. Perry S. Heath received a telegram from R. C. Kerens of St. Louis today, stating that he would leave for Salt Lake on Monday, and arrive here Wednesday, on which day Senator W. A. Clark is also expected to reach here to attend the directors' meeting for the San Pedro line. Meanwhile, the Oregon Short Line officials have been exceedingly active, and met here today, in anticipation, apparently, of the Clark people's meeting.

Early this morning, Vice-President Cornish of the Short Line, Union Pacific and Chicago and Alton arrived in town, and was accompanied by Judge W. R. Kelly, general counsel for the Union Pacific. These gentlemen have been all day in close conference with General Manager Bancroft and Attorney Parley L. Williams, discussing plans of the extension of the Short Line, via Uvada, to Los Angeles, and particularly the legal battle that is to be fought at Carson City, over the disputed roadbed. That struggle is not far off, and it is now certain that both roads will push toward Los Angeles, irrespective of the outcome at Carson.

The policy of the Short Line is to harrass the San Pedro people in every possible way. The lines the various surveying parties are now running prove that clearly, and developments also show that the San Pedro people will be embarrassed as much as possible in getting ties, rails, supplies etc., from this end of the line. Every road that Harriman is connected with contemplates blocking the way as far as it can.

It is believed here that the Interstate Commerce Commission alone can prevent prohibitory tariff rates on all materials ordered by Senator Clark and his associates. Vice-Presidents T. E. Gibbon and J. Ross Clark and G. B. Leighton of Los Angeles are expected here tomorrow. C. O. Whittemore will be here in the morning. The directors' meeting will be held on the 27th inst.

MISS HECKER'S GOOD WORK.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Regarding the colonization plans an official of the Santa Fé said: "We intend to bring over only the better class of Italians and we have to do a large business from Italy during the next year. HAYS IN SALT LAKE.

LIMITED'S TIME SHORTENED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SALT LAKE (Utah) June 20.—President Hayes of the Southern Pacific system, who has been in the east for some time, left here today for San Francisco. It is stated that during President Hays visit in the East arrangements were practically concluded by him for the material shortening of the running time of the overland limited between Chicago and San Francisco. The arrangements contemplate a reduction of several hours in the present running time of that train.

SIOUX CITY ROAD SOLD.

BRINGS GOVERNMENT'S PRICE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Acting under the authority of the act approved June 6, 1900, and a notice issued jointly by the Secretary of the Treasury, the acting Attorney-General and the Secretary of the Interior, the government's interest in the Sioux City and Pacific Railway Company was sold at auction today to the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company for $2,112,000, this being the upset price fixed by the government, and including a credit of $250,000 due the company for mail transportation, etc. The larger amount was paid in cash.

Some time ago, the commission appointed to estimate the value of the road fixed the amount at $3,500,000. Of this total there were prior liens amounting to $1,628,000, which would leave the value of the government's claim $1,872,000, which, with the credit of $250,000, makes the amount realized today. The total amount of the government's claim, however, was $1,678,220, in principal, and $2,556,269 in interest, making a total of $4,184,589.

According to the value of the road as estimated by experts, no amount greater than the price brought today could be realized, hence he upset price was fixed at that figure. The indebtedness grew out of the issuance of bonds by the United States, to the railroad company, and the acts of June 1, 1862, and July 2, 1864

VICTORIA (B. C.) The company says it will be completed by October 1 next. There are fifty-five miles to build in British Columbia and ninety-five miles in Montana.

WILL ACT TOGETHER.

U. P. AND ST. P. DEAL.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Evening Post today says that the only basis for the recent rumors concerning the passing of control of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road is that there has been a mutual understanding between the Rockefellers for the St. Paul and the Schiff interests in the Union Pacific, that the St. Paul will act in harmony on rate matters with the other western roads and that it will not be discriminated against by the Pacific roads on transcontinental business.

MEXICAN CENTRAL DEAL.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BOSTON, June 20.—The directors of the Mexican Central Railroad at a meeting held here today authorized the purchase of the Monterey and Mexican Gulf road, 390 miles in length.

At the afternoon session the following Executive Committee was appointed by the directors: J. J. Mitchell, H. C. Pierce, F. H. Prince, Eben Richards, A. A. Robinson, W. L. Snow and J. J. Van Blarcom.

EXTENSION IN MANITOBA.

CROPS ARE ENORMOUS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—Premier Roblin of Manitoba, a Montreal dispatch to the Times says, has just had a long conference with T. C. Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and at its conclusion he announced that he had arranged for the building by the company of about eight miles of branch lines in Manitoba for a cash bonus of $75,000, to be paid by the province. The branches are to be built to give farmers a chance to market their grain.

"Never in the history of Manitoba has there been such an abundant promise of good crops," said Premier Roblin. "We have this year 2,000,000 acres in wheat. We expect to get between 40,000,000 and 60,000,000 bushels of wheat."

RUMORS OF CHANGES.

FILLMORE MAY QUIT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—There are many rumors here of impending changes in the operating departments of the Southern Pacific, but they lack official confirmation. The officials state they know nothing of any changes. Concerning the report that J. A. Fillmore, manager of the Pacific system, would retire, Mr. Fillmore today said: "I have not been officially notified of any contemplated change in my department. Indeed, the first and only intimation of such a move was conveyed to me by the press; and, of course, I cannot accept that as official. I have not been called upon to resign."

Notwithstanding Mr. Fillmore's statement, there is a general feeling among the minor employés that Mr. Fillmore is to be succeeded by J. M. Herbert of the Iron Mountain system, who arrived here from St. Louis recently. It is understood that Mr. Herbert has severed his connection with the Iron Mountain. It is expected that the next official circular will announce the appointment of E. H. Fitzhugh as assistant to President Hays.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN HEART OF ST. LOUIS.

DAMAGE REACHES OVER QUARTER OF A MILLION.

Terrible Explosion Precedes the Flames and Strikes Terror to Hundreds of Residents Living Near by, Who Rush Out into the Streets Half-dressed.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) June 20.—The J. B. Sickles Saddlery Company's plant, a four-story building on the Southwest corner of Twenty-first and Washington avenue, was destroyed by fire, which broke out at 2 o'clock this morning. The fire was preceded by an explosion.

Fire Chief Swingley estimates the damage to the Sickles plant at $300,000 to stock, and $100,000 to the building, and to the Reynolds Carriage Company at $50,000. The damage to Celia's saloon will not exceed $10,000. The damage to the Lambert Pharmacy Company, he estimates at $10,000.

The explosion, which occurred in the front part of the building, was a terrific one, shaking the buildings for blocks around, and arousing people in the immediate neighborhood. When the first companies arrived flames were pouring from the Sickles structure and shooting many feet above the room.

Within a few minutes after the firemen had started to work on the building, the flames had gained such a headway that Chief Swingley saw the Sickles building was doomed, and all his efforts were directed toward preventing the fire spreading to adjoining structures.

Twenty minutes later the flames leaped across Twenty-first street to where the Reynolds Carriage Company's plant was, which caught fire and was burning fiercely. Louis Celia's saloon was destroyed a few minutes later. Within an hour from the time of the explosion, the Sickles building was gutted, only the front and side walls and a portion of the rear wall remaining. The flames leaped across St. Charles street to the Lambert Pharmacy Company's establishment, in which was stored a large quantity of chemicals, drugs and other high combustibles and explosives. The firemen succeeded, after a half hour's hard work, in confining the flames to the rear of the building.

The greatest excitement prevailed in the neighborhood during the first few moments following the explosion. On Locust, Olive and Washington avenue boarding-houses and rooming-houses abound, and the occupants of these, aroused by the shock, fled precipitately into the streets in their night clothes, terror-stricken at the spectacle.

WENT THROUGH HELL GATE.

Capt. Manney Takes the Big Battleship Massachusetts Where No Other War Vessel of the Class Has Been.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—Without the assistance of a pilot and to demonstrate that a first-class battleship could be navigated through Hell Gate successfully, Capt. Henry M. Manney took the big battleship Massachusetts through the narrows today. It was the first time in the history of the navy that any commander of a war vessel of this class ever attempted the feat, and river craft and the shores were filled today to witness the trip of the Massachusetts.

The passing of the mammoth fighting machine through the dangerous waters of Hell Gate successfully proves that in case of hostilities with a foreign power a battleship of the same draught of the Massachusetts, if she passed the fortifications of Willett's Point and Fort Schuyler, could repeat the performance of the Massachusetts.

BARRING HELL GATE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The Navy Department has taken cognizance of the action of the commander of the battleship Massachusetts in going through Hell Gate today on his way from New York to Newburyport. This course is regarded as extremely dangerous for a ship of the dimensions of the Massachusetts, and as a result Secretary Long issued a stringent order tonight that hereafter no battleship shall go through Hell Gate except under conditions of exceptional emergency.

STRINGING-UP OF "PROPHET."

Smith the Head of a Band of Thugs.

Met Secretly to Plot Against Whites.

Prince Edward at Large—No Further Lynchings Likely For a Time.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

BENTON (La.) June 20.—There is little excitement here over the lynching of the two negroes, Smith and McLand, last night. It is claimed that the two men were leaders of a secret order, and had entered many conspiracies against the whites. The mob gave Smith five minutes in which to pray. The two men were swung up to a tree, the bodies hanging until noon today. McLand met his fate stoically.

Prince Edwards, the negro who killed John G. Foster, is still at large, although every effort is being made to apprehend him. Unless Edwards is captured, it is believed that there will be no further violence offered the dozen or more negro prisoners who are now confined in jail charged with complicity in the murder of Foster.

"KING" AND "PRINCES."

DETAILS OF NEGRO PLOT.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—The lynching of the two negroes last night near Shreveport created a sensation today, as, with the excitement dying out, it was thought their lives would be spared, at least until the capture of Prince Edwards, who killed J. C. Foster.

A special from Shreveport, however, says that evidence was discovered so clearly establishing the guilt of Smith and McLand as enemies of the whites, and dangerous elements to be left alive among the negroes, that the people of Bossier regarded their execution as essential to the preservation of order in the parish. The evidence obtained by the police showed the following facts:

The organization of which "Prophet" Smith was the head had its organization in Houston, and was known as the "Church of the Living God." The members of the supreme council, as indicated by regularly-printed letterheads, which were found, were Smith and McLand, who were lynched, and Prince Edwards, the murderer of John Foster.

Smith, when he came to Louisiana, established himself at Shreveport, but was ordered away by the Chief of Police as a dangerous character. After the shooting of Foster, a search of his premises was instituted, and the "Ark of Government," a rudely-constructed box with hoodoo designs on and within it, was found. When it was touched by the searchers the negroes were greatly terrified and declared that but one had advanced far enough to lay hands on the sacred box.

The members of the church, known as "Princes," had regular meetings, at which Smith presided, with the designation of "King." The following is an exact copy from the minutes of the meeting held on the Foster plantation, showing how business was carried on and the enmity that existed between Smith and his followers and the Chief of Police of Shreveport and Foster, the murdered man:

"The royal archive of the kingdom of God met in Supreme Council. Sang 'Dark Was the Night.' Opened by reading the thirty-second chapter of Isaiah. After F. K. Smith, the King announced the meeting, he stated he was advised of God to call the princes together in council to decide what should be done with the Chief of Police and his force for interfering with the king of the Church of God in Shreveport.

"Prince Webb being the first to arise, said he was in favor of demanding six months' affliction upon the Chief. Prince Smith said he was in favor of the same. Also Prince McLand, also Prince Johnson also Prince Edwards. All concurred, demanding six months' affliction upon Chief Lake of Shreveport.

"The next case was the rockers of the building. The case was decided, all who rock the building must be punished with death within four days.

"A complaint was taken against J. G. Foster that he should be tormented until he gave consent that all saints leave the place."

Before he was lynched last night, Smith confessed that he had loaded the gun with which Foster was killed. Many letters of incendiary character written by Smith and his followers have been found. The discovery of the conspiracy led to last night's lynching. Sheriff Thompson of Bossier made no attempt to interfere, in view of the superior numbers of the mob.

NEGRO KILLS PATROLMAN.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) June 20.—Patrolman E. H. Debray was shot and killed in the west end of this city by a negro, who has not been captured. It is said Debray was decoyed to his death. One man, a negro named Hammond, who sent the policeman to the place where death was dealt him, has been arrested.

Hammond told the policeman there was trouble at the end of the car line. Debray found three negroes there, apparently in a row. One of the negroes resisted arrest, and shot Debray.

BAD FOR MRS. BARKER.

Many of Her Neighbors Swear That the Reputation of the Prosecutor for Truth is Very Bad.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—The case of Thomas C. Barker, charged with the shooting of Rev. John Keller at Arlington, N. J., last February, will go to the jury in Jersey City tomorrow about 3 o'clock. A verdict may be expected before night.

Before court adjourned this evening the evidence was all in and nothing now remains but argument of counsel and the judge's charge. Today Mr. Keller was once more upon the stand. He seemed to have been aroused for the time being from the lethargic state which marked his conduct and action when he testified on direct examination. Then he spoke in a low, tired voice.

Today his denials of the allegations of Mr. and Mrs. Barker were spoken in a loud, firm tone and when asked if the alleged outrage was the reason for Mrs. Barker leaving the church, he shouted out the "no" so that it rang through the courtroom and corridors. His denials generally were strong, positive and absolute. It was a hard day for Mrs. Barker, for neighbor after neighbor went on the stand and swore that her reputation for truth was bad. The battle of the insanity experts was the third feature of the day.

MEXICAN OUTLAW CORRALLED IN THICKET.

DETERMINED TEXANS HAVE HIM ENTIRELY SURROUNDED.

Border Warfare Has Already Cost Six Lives and is Now Hotter Than Ever. History of the Trouble Reads Like Fiction.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) June 20.—A special to the Express from Cotulla says that Gregorio Cortez, the alleged slayer of Sheriffs Morris and Glovef, is now within a few miles of Cotulla, but has not yet been captured. Tuesday afternoon information was received that the Mexican outlaw was headed this way from Campbellton. This evening Sheriff Vann of Kerr county, with his posse, on a special train, arrived here, and was joined by Sheriff Hill and his posse. They went to Twohig, and from there down the river to cut off Cortes.

Last night Sheriff Kinsel wired Deputy Maltberger, that his posse was on a hot trail near Milette, and that Cortez had been seen, but had escaped. Maltberger and W. C. Campbell struck his trail about five miles from Cotulla this morning, and followed him where he had cut several wire fences. Blood stains showed that Cortez's horse was about exhausted, and unable to jump. About 10 o'clock the pursuing party found the little brown mare that Cortez had been riding. She was badly fagged. Cortez's trail then led into a dense thicket, covering hundreds of acres. No trail was found leading from there, and he is supposed to be hiding in the thicket.

A large posse headed by Sheriff Avant arrived here this afternoon by train and left for the thicket. Strong hopes are entertained for the speedy capture of Cortez. The horse found is undoubtedly the one ridden by Cortez, who came near Tilden, through Duil, Irving, O'Connor and the Johnson ranches, cutting fences as he fled. The posses was in sight of him one just before 8 o'clock, but he escaped. His clothing is in tatters, and he has thrown away his rifle, retaining only his pistols.

ARID LAND CONGRESS.

Western Representatives Meet at Cheyenne and Will Consider a Bill Looking to Reclamation.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHEYENNE (Wyo.) June 20.—State engineers and Representatives and Senators from Western States met in Cheyenne today to discuss irrigation, government aid, and the best methods of reclaiming arid lands. Resolutions were presented and a plan outlined for action at the next session of Congress. It is understood that western Congressmen and Senators will work together on this important question, as they never have before.

A bill is proposed to provide for the settlement of the arid public lands and to authorize the construction of reservoirs for the storage of water and other necessary irrigation works for arid lands reclamation. It provides:

"That all money received from the sale or disposal of public lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Washington, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, excepting money set aside by law for educational purposes and excepting also the salaries of registers and receivers of the United States land offices, located within said States and Territories, shall be and are hereby reserved for the benefit of the State or Territory in which said lands are sold to be kept as a special fund to be known as the 'Arid land reclamation fund,' and shall be under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for the examination, survey and construction of reservoirs and other irrigation works.

"Any of the States or Territories desiring to avail themselves of the provisions of the act shall enact laws, accepting the conditions of this act and organize and maintain a State Engineer's office with authority to plan and make estimates for reservoirs to be paid for out of the reclamation fund."

CALIFORNIA NOT GUILTY.

Washington Has Pests of Her Own.

San Jose Scale Found on Her Trees.

Shipments of Klondike Gold. Indictment of Modoc Lynchers—Militia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The general belief that all of the San José scale and other fruit pests which have become prevalent in Washington during the past few years are the result of infected fruit shipped from California to points in this State is being gradually proven incorrect. Some of the most expert horticulturists in Washington are now of the opinion that many of these pests are native to this State.

Orlando Beck, Horticultural Inspector of Yakima county, has just completed a trip of inspection through the Nittitas Valley, where he found San José scale on many native trees. Specimens have been examined by numerous fruit growers, who pronounce the pest to be genuine scale. It is now admitted in the Yakima Valley that the orchards there are, likely to have become infected from these native trees, instead of from fruit trees shipped in from California.

Most orchardists are now saving their fruit by thorough spraying. Plans are being devised for fighting pests in groves of native trees, where they seem to be indigenous.

LOOKOUT LYNCHERS INDICTED.

LATEST FROM ALTURAS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALTURAS, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The grand jury, which adjourned yesterday, after having investigated the Lookout lynchings, returned five indictments for murder, Robert Leventon, Isom Eades and James Wilson are the persons named. The indictments charge these three men with the murder of Martin Wilson, the fifteen-year-old son of Mary Wilson, a squaw, "Old Mary," as she is called, was formerly the wife of Calvin Hill, by whom she had one son, James. She was lynched with his father, his brother, Frank Hall, young Martin Wilson and Dan Yantis. The evidence against the three indicted men is said to be much stronger in the case of Martin Wilson than in the case of the other four men lynched.

Robert Leventon is a blacksmith of Lookout. He is a brother-in-law of Deputy Constable J. W. Brown, another man charged with murder. Brown lives in Lookout, and has not a very savory reputation. Isom Eades is a "squawman," living on a ranch about five miles from Lookout. It is understood that evidence was brought out by the grand jury investigation showing that Brown, Leventon and Eades were the principal participants in the events leading up to the lynching. One of these incidents was the attempted hanging of Frank Hall. He was twice hung up to the rafter of the barn, but the rope broke. Isom Eades then struck him over the head with a shotgun.

Leventon, Brown and Eades have made no attempt to escape, and it is believed they will stand trial in the expectation that no evidence will be brought against them, as participants in a lynching cannot be compelled to give testimony that might incriminate themselves.

CAMP GAGE ATTACKED AND TAKEN BY STORM.

BRIG.-GEN. DICKINSON CAPTURED IN BUS BY LADIES.

Brig.-Gen. Warfield Congratulated on His Well-planned Strategy — Guns Loaded With Soap—Hospital and Guardhouse Cases.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SANTA CRUZ, June 20.—Camp Gage was attacked unexpectedly at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Second Brigade under Brig.-Gen. Warfield, on returning from Capitola. The surprise was complete. The camp was occupied by the First and Third brigades. The outposts were deceived by the ruse, several companies in the road. While they were watching them, Cos. B and G of the First Infantry and Co. D of the Fifth Infantry effected an entrance through the kitchen of the Light Artillery and surrounded the camp. An alarm was sounded, the Sixth Infantry being the first to respond. Shots were exchanged, and the firing was fast and furious. Reinforcements coming up to support the companies that had made an entrance to the camp caused the camp to surrender unconditionally.

Brig.-Gen. Dickinson, who was in a buggy with a party of ladies, on his way to headquarters, was captured and taken before Gen. Warfield, who permitted him to retain his side arms and allowed him to return to headquarters.

Col. Filmer received the surrender of the camp from Maj. Curson. The attack was well planned, and Gen. Warfield was the recipient of numerous congratulations, for the problem so satisfactorily solved. It was one in which no previous preparation had been made.

During the engagement, Lieut. Nipper was struck in the neck with a wad, receiving a slight wound. A private was struck in the chest. Although blank cartridges were supposed to be used, it was evident that some of the men had placed soap in the guns, which was responsible for Lieut. Nipper and the private being hit.

The Second Brigade remained at Capitola all night. On reaching Capitola they built fires and erected tents under trees. By the time the camp was captured, many visitors had arrived. On the return march, a bugler had his arm and wrist broken, the arm from his horse. He had been thrown the raising of the flag this morning, the music was furnished by the Second Infantry Band. NOT GUILTY.

Washington Has Pests of Her Own.

San Jose Scale Found on Her Trees.

Shipments of Klondike Gold. Indictment of Modoc Lynchers—Militia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The general belief that all of the San José scale and other fruit pests which have become prevalent in Washington during the past few years are the result of infected fruit shipped from California to points in this State is being gradually proven incorrect. Some of the most expert horticulturists in Washington are now of the opinion that many of these pests are native to this State.

Orlando Beck, Horticultural Inspector of Yakima county, has just completed a trip of inspection through Kittitas Valley, where he found San José scale on many native trees. Specimens have been examined by numerous fruit growers, who pronounce the pest to be genuine scale. It is now admitted in the Yakima Valley that the orchards there are likely to have become infected from these native trees, instead of from fruit trees shipped in from California.

Most orchardists are now saving their fruit by thorough spraying. Plans are being devised for fighting pests in groves of native trees, where they seem to be indigenous.

LOOKOUT LYNCHERS INDICTED.

LATEST FROM ALTURAS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALTURAS, June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The grand jury, which adjourned yesterday, after having investigated the Lookout lynchings, returned three indictments for murder. Robert Leventon, Isom Eades and James W. Brown are the persons named. The indictments charge these three men with the murder of Martin Wilson, the thirteen-year-old son of Mary Wilson, the squaw. "Old Mary," as she is called, was formerly the wife of Calvin Hall, by whom she had one son, James, who was lynched with his father, his mother, Frank Hall, young Martin Brown and Dan Yantis. The evidence against the three indicted men is said to be much stronger in the case of Wilson than in the case of the four men lynched.

Robert Leventon is a blacksmith of Lookout. He is a brother-in-law of Constable J. W. Brown, another man charged with murder. Brown lives in Lookout, and has not a very good reputation. Isom Eades is a "cowman," living on a ranch about 12 miles from Lookout. It is understood that evidence was brought out by the grand jury investigation showing that Brown, Leventon and Eades were the principal participants in the events leading up to the lynching. One of these incidents was the attempted lynching of Frank Hall. He was twice strung up to the rafter of the barn, but the rope broke. Isom Eades then struck him over the head with a six-shooter.

Leventon, Brown and Eades have made no attempt to escape, and it is believed they will stand trial in the expectation that no evidence will be brought against them, as participants in a lynching cannot be compelled to give testimony that might incriminate themselves.

CAMP GAGE ATTACKED AND TAKEN BY STORM.

BRIG.-GEN. DICKINSON CAPTURED IN BUS BY LADIES.

Brig.-Gen. Warfield Congratulated on His Well-planned Strategy — Guns Loaded With Soap—Hospital and Courthouse Cases.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SANTA CRUZ, June 20.—Camp Gage was attacked unexpectedly at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Second Brigade under Brig.-Gen. Warfield, who was returning from Capitola. The battle was complete. The camp was defended by the First and Third brigades. The outposts were deceived by the enemy's uniforms, companies in the road. As they were watching them, Cos. B and G of the First Infantry and Co. K of the Fifth Infantry effected an entrance through the kitchen of the Artillery and surrounded the camp. An alarm was sounded, the Sixth Infantry being the first to respond. Shots were exchanged, and the firing was hot and furious. Reinforcements were rushed up to support the companies that had made an entrance to the camp, and caused the camp to surrender unconditionally.

Brig.-Gen. Dickinson, who was in a bus with a party of ladies, on his way to headquarters, was captured and taken before Gen. Warfield, who generously allowed him to retain his side arms and allowed him to return to headquarters.

Colonel Primer received the surrender of the camp from Maj. Curson. The attack was well planned, and Gen. Warfield was the recipient of numerous congratulations, for the problem was satisfactorily solved. It was one in which no previous preparation had been made.

During the engagement, Lieut. Nipper was struck in the neck with a ball, receiving a slight wound. A horse was struck in the chest. Although blank cartridges were supposed to be used, it was evident that some of the men had placed soap in the guns, which was responsible for Lieut. Nipper's wound. The private being hit.

The Second Brigade remained at Capitola all night. On reaching Capitola they built fires and erected tents for the night. By the time the camp was established many visitors had arrived on the return march, a bugler had his horse.. He had a sprained wrist broken.

The raising of the flag this morning to the music was furnished by the Fifth Infantry Band. The divisional field officer for the day was Maj. B. Wankowski of the Seventh Infantry. Officers of the guard were First Lieutenant L. W. H. White of Co. A, Second Infantry, and Second Lieutenant L. C. Moore of Co. E, Second Infantry.

The guard house has been full since last night. Over thirty were placed in it for creating a disturbance around the calaboose last night. An investigation has been held today and several men were discharged from custody for having no connection with the affair, their captain vouching for them. Tomorrow a court-martial is to be held. This affair is creating a great stir in camp.

The hospital has two new cases, Lieut. Wilson of Co. F, Sixth Regiment, was brought in with a sprained ankle. The other case was that of one of the privates, who met with an accident while diving in the plunge baths.

This afternoon, Gen. Dickinson and staff and the colonels of the regiments and members of the Governor's staff attended a lunch given under the trees by the Country Club at Vue de l'Eau Park. The Sixth Regiment had a dress parade. The Seventh Regiment Band gave a concert on Pacific avenue. Tonight, citizens gave a reception and ball at the Armory to officers. At the Sea Beach Hotel a reception and ball was given to the Second Brigade, music being furnished by the Fifth Regiment Band.

Tomorrow at noon Gov. Gage will arrive. A review in his honor will be given at 5 o'clock, after which he will be a guest of Gen. Dickinson at dinner. If the Governor remains Saturday morning, a sham battle will take place, each man being furnished with seventy rounds of ammunition. Maj.-Gen. Shafter is expected tomorrow.

VETERANS' REUNION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

The camp, which opens next Monday, will continue two weeks. Each evening will be devoted to musical and literary exercises. One evening will be given to the Women's Relief Corps and another to the Ladies of the G.A.R. About six hundred are expected to be in camp.

MATT BURTS IN JAIL.

SHOOTS BOB WARREN'S ARM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) June 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Matt Burts and Bob Warren, two cowboys, engaged in a quarrel at a round-up near Willcox yesterday, and the men pulled their six-shooters. Burts was the first to fire, and shot Warren in the right arm knocking his gun from his hand and wounding him so the arm had to be amputated. Burts was arrested, and is in jail at Willcox.

Burts, with Billy Stiles, held up the Southern Pacific train at Cochise, a year ago, in which Burt Alvord and Bill Downing were implicated. Burts gave evidence against both Alvord and Downing, and was given a light sentence of five years at Yuma. Gov. Murphy recently pardoned Burts. Warren, whom he shot, was a friend of Alvord, and did not like Burts.

Both consignments will probably arrive in Seattle next week.

ROCK CRUSHER BURNED.

FIRE AT FOLSOM PRISON.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SACRAMENTO, June 20.—The State rock-crushing plant at Folsom Prison was destroyed by fire tonight, entailing a loss of many thousands of dollars. The rock crusher, which is a massive concern, toppled over into the canal of the Folsom Power Company and for three hours tonight Sacramento was in darkness.

Seventy-five convicts were turned out, but could do little towards extinguishing the flames. They worked hard to clear the canal, which was completely dammed up, and by 10 o'clock it was partially opened.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

In the party are the Rev. K. M. Eckoff, a member of the National Council of the Students Christian Union of Norway; J. D. With the party was F. P. Turner of New York, secretary of the Students Volunteer Movement of the United States and Canada.

The principal purpose of the visit of the foreign representatives to this country is to study American methods of work. They say the movement is steadily growing abroad. After the conference at Lake Geneva they will attend a similar conference to be held at Northfield, Mass.

CUBAN SUGAR CROP NOW NEARLY NORMAL.

BARONIAL PLANTER TYPE RAPIDLY DISAPPEARING.

Present Year's Output of Sweet Stuff Exceeds Three Hundred Thousand Tons in Matanzas and Cardenas—Next Season's Product Will Be Still Larger.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—The correspondent of the Tribune, writing from Matanzas, says that the sugar-crop figures for this season are encouraging enough. In round numbers the production is fixed at 600,000 tons, and this has brought not far from $30,000,000. The payment for the crop has helped to reduce the unfavorable trade balance against the island. While the price has been fair, had it been a shade higher the production would have reached 650,000 tons, but many of the planters preferred not to grind, believing that prices would be a little better next year. The cane acreage for the coming season is about one-third larger than during the last year. It is not likely that much of the new lands which are being planted in the eastern end of the island in the belief that tariff concessions will be made by the United States, will have cane ready for grinding within the next twelve months, yet there is every reason to look for a crop of 800,000 tons to $50,000 tons in the season of 1902.

In this, the great central sugar belt, another year will bring most of the plantations up to their normal production before the insurrection. There are still many estates around Matanzas which have not been cleared and replanted, but they grow fewer with each month, and the probability is that their distressed owners either will be closed out under foreclosure proceedings or will be able to finance their plantations through the year without aid.

In the Cardenas district there are few estates which have not fully recovered, and it has happened this year that Cardenas has gone ahead of Matanzas in its shipments, but both ports have handled more than 700,000 bags or 100,000 tons each. Some of the bad belt, as it is known, is still under partial recultivation, but this is because these poor lands do not pay for raising sugar at present prices. Most of them are bargains to Americans, who think that all sugar lands in Cuba are the same, and who sometimes are led into buying wherever they see cane growing.

The Cuban planter is going through an industrial and a social revolution. The old baronial estates are passing away. The individual planter is becoming less and less a factor. He talks of the old-time feudalism just as the southern cotton planters used to talk of it, and he grieves over the new conditions which reduce his own importance, but there is no remedy. His hospitality, where he has the means, is as princely as in the past, and if he has been able to get large enough advances on his crop or to find some corner of the plantation which was not already mortgaged he still counts on the season in Paris, London or Saratoga with his family, but with the creditors pressing him and the new conditions of production to be met, it is only in a few cases that he is able to take this vacation.

COLOMBIA IS PEACEFUL.

Man Who Claims to Be Familiar With Political Affairs at Bogota Says Revolution is Over.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—A man who has just arrived here from Colombia and whose business keeps him in close touch with the government at Bogota, denies the report from Kingston, Jamaica, that the rebels had refused to surrender their arms because of cruelty to the political prisoners.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the political prisoners were released long ago, and the only persons confined in the prisons at the present time are those who have been arrested for offenses not arising from the revolution. The various reports about continued unrest in Colombia are prompted by Gen. Uribe-Uribe, the revolutionary leader, and his friends. Uribe-Uribe feels hurt because in Carthagena and Barranquilla his peace manifesto has been contemptuously received, and he personally has been grossly insulted and very unfairly treated by the local press.

"Since I arrived in New York I have been kept advised on the developments in Colombia, and my latest dispatches are to the effect that the conditions are in every way encouraging. The banks of Bogota and Medillin have offered the government a large loan, to put a stop to the issue of paper money, and the Medillin banks have offered the local government all the funds that may be required to complete the railroad from Porto Barrio to Medillin, as the present government subsidy is deemed inadequate. This railway, which will connect the capital of the Department of Antioquia with the Magdalena River, will help to develop one of the richest mining regions in South America.

DENIED INDIAN PRAYER.

JUSTICE BRADLEY'S DECISION.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Justice Bradley, in the Equity Court, today denied the application of Lone Wolf and other Indians for an injunction against the Secretary of the Interior to restrain him from opening the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache lands in Oklahoma to settlement. Without going into the facts of the case, the court held that the question was purely a political one, with which the court had no power to deal.

SECRETARY HAY'S CALLERS.

RUSSIAN TARIFF CASE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The Russian Ambassador, Count Cassini, had a conference of about half an hour with Secretary Hay today during which the tariff questions which have arisen were discussed fully. The conference did not, however, lead to any new development in the matter. It is understood, however, that the exchange brought about includes assurances from the Ambassador that Russia's action was entirely devoid of political importance, and was in no way connected with a move antagonistic to American products.

The Italian Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Carignani, also had a talk with Secretary Hay, during which tariff matters were informally discussed. In connection with the differential duty now levied on Italian sugar, the Italian authorities state that their official returns as to imports show that no Italian sugar was brought into the United States last year.

DIVERTING WESTERN STREAMS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Acting under the general direction of Chief Hydrographer George Newell, surveying parties have just begun work in the Gunnison River Valley in Western Colorado, near Montrose, which looks to diverting the river by means of a great tunnel through a mountain range into a dry valley. Another party has begun the preliminary work of diverting St. Mary's River into the Mill River Valley in Montana.

DABURON HONORED.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Information has reached the French Embassy here that by a decision of the government on June 3, a French corporal has been decorated with a gold medal of the second class for an act of heroism toward two American soldiers during the campaign in China. The recipient is Corp. Daburon, a bugler of the Sixteenth Regiment of Colonial Infantry.

While the allied forces were marching on Peking and just after they had taken Yang Tsun, two American soldiers fell into the Pei River. At the risk of his life, the Frenchman jumped into the stream and succeeded in rescuing both of the Americans.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Civil government will be established in the Philippines on July 4. Judge William H. Taft will be designated as Civil Governor. He will remain at the head of the Philippine Commission, which is to be continued. The order creating him Civil Governor will be issued by the President through the Secretary of War.

OLD CUBAN BONDS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—As an incident to the consideration by the Cuban constitutional convention of the proposition to redeem through the government to be established the bonds which were issued by the insurrection party in Cuba before the intervention of the United States, the government here is making some effort to ascertain just how much of this indebtedness is outstanding. The inquiry has disclosed the undertaking by certain New York interests to supply the Cuban junta with several hundred thousand dollars in cash at the rate of $1 in cash for about $10 in bonds to be issued by the Cuban insurrectionists, but it is not known how many of these bonds were issued, or into whose hands they drifted.

TEACHERS IN DEMAND.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20. — The transport Thomas, carrying teachers to Manila, will sail July 23. Judge Taft today cabled approval of the request of Superintendent Atkinson, who has charge of the schools of the Philippines, that ten additional teachers be assigned from Yale, Harvard, Cornell Universities, University of California and University of Michigan. These teachers are to be paid $1200 a year. Their appointment lies wholly with the Philippine Commission.

OFFICIAL ADVICES.

COLOMBIAN REVOLUTION NEWS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Dr. Martinez Silva, Minister from Colombia, has received dispatches from the capital of Colombia, which he regards as setting at rest the reports that Colombian revolutionists are again in strong force around Panama. The Minister's dispatches state that the uprising has been stamped out with the exception of a few small and scattered bands operating in the large harbors of Panama. The bands are said to have no strength in Panama City, but their guerilla tactics in the neighborhood account for the alleged trouble experienced by American and other parties.

In the view of the Colombia authorities, the revolution is actually at an end and the bands around Panama are treated as a part of the guerilla movement like that going on in the Philippines. As confirming this view of the government, the official dispatches state that the Bank of Bogota has offered to advance the National Government all the funds it requires if the issue of paper money is discontinued.

ITALIAN DIPLOMAT'S VISIT.

MARQUIS MALASPANA COMING.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The new Italian Minister to Japan, Mr. Melejari, has arrived in this country on his way to his new post and through inadvertence his name has been given in press dispatches as the new Minister to the United States. The successor to Baron Fava is Marquis Maiaspana, late Italian Minister at Buenos Ayres. The Marquis arrived in Rome from Buenos Ayres a few days ago and is now in conference with the Italian authorities preparatory to coming to Washington.

SOUTH AFRICA

A SQUITH HAS SPLIT THE LIBERAL PARTY.

HE DECLARES BOER INDEPENDENCE IMPOSSIBLE.

Former Secretary Says the Organization Favors a Free Federation on the Lines of Canada and Australia—Is Hailed as New Leader.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, June 20.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Herbert H. Asquith, the former Liberal Home Secretary, speaking at a Liberal dinner this evening, protested against the pro-Boer resoultions adopted at Queen's Hall yesterday being accepted as a pronouncement of Liberal party. He declared that Boer independence was impossible, and said the Liberal party favored a free federated South Africa on the lines of Canada and Australia.

By his trenchant speech, Asquith achieved the complete severance of the two wings of the Liberal party. This was done to the great joy of the Conservatives, whose press organs this morning cannot find words sufficient to applaud his courage and honesty. The press is of the opinion that the party of many leaders will now find greater difficulty than ever in discovering who is the real leader of the party. The Daily Chronicle hails Asquith as the true leader, and calls upon Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman to declare with equal explicitness whether he will follow John Morley's banner.

"It is the duty of the Liberals," says the Daily News, "to now loyally support Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman."

It may safely be predicted that Asquith will find a very large following, both among the Liberal members of the House of Commons and the country generally.

INDEPENDENCE, SAYS KRUGER.

PRICE OF AFRICAN PEACE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—According to a Times special from Washington, the Boer sympathizers in the United States are making preparations for a visit from Mr. Kruger to this country in the autumn, which was announced some time ago by Montague White, the Transvaal representative in Washington. C. W. Van Der Hoogt, an active Boer sympathizer of Washington, who has just returned there from New York, says a conference of leading pro-Boers was held on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and that the chairman of the reception committee was chosen. He will be Consul-General Pierce of the Orange Free State, whose office is in New York.

Van Der Hoogt says the Boer agents in this country are in possession of complete information, both by telegraph and mail about the progress of the war, and that their cable advices show that Mrs. Botha's visit to Mr. Kruger is in no way connected with peace negotiations. Mrs. Botha took with her to Europe detailed information from her husband and from Gen. Schalkburger, the acting President.

Van Der Hoogt said that Gen. Botha was permitted to communicated by cable with Kruger on condition that he would try to get Kruger to agree to certain peace terms, favorable to Great Britain, and that the British authorities should see the dispatches. Botha carried out the agreement, and Kruger's reply was that independence was the first basis of any terms of peace.

RECEPTION FOR KRUGER.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—Prominent Boer sympathizers are actively preparing to receive President Kruger when he visits the United States a few months hence. A conference of pro-Boers, lasting several days, has just been held in this city, at which Charles D. Pierce, Consul-General of the Orange Free State, was made chairman of the Reception Committee.

Pierce said today that no definite plans had been arranged so far, and that President Kruger would not reach this country until late in the fall.

COLONIES NOT PETTED.

Great Britain Will not Provide a Preferential Duty on Sugar from Canada for Fear of Loss.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

LONDON, June 20.—[By Atlantic Cable.] During a discussion of a clause of the finance bill in the House of Commons today, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, informed the mover of an amendment providing for a preferential duty on sugar from the British colonies that he had no intention of embarking on such a policy. It would, he said, benefit neither this country nor the colonies, would deprive the exchequer of revenue without benefitting the consumer, and might endanger trade with foreign countries.

There was a strong feeling on this subject in Germany, and the acceptance of the amendment would mean running a most serious risk of losing the favored-nation treatment. Great Britain now enjoyed in Germany. If preference was extended to sugar from Canada, Australia would want special treatment for other products, and then foreign countries would offer the same concessions to the colonies, and ask for similar treatment. He was not prepared to risk the loss of Great Britain's foreign trade, which was greater than that of the colonies. The preference granted by Canada had not greatly benefited trade between that colony and Great Britain, for the simple reason that the preference still left a protective duty against the British in favor of the Canadian manufacturer. Although, happily, British trade had largely increased with Canada, the trade of the United States with Canada has also largely increased.

Nebraskan Says He is for Mark Hanna for Republican Presidential Nominee, But Uncertain as to Democratic Choice.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, June 20.—W. J. Bryan, in a talk with Chicago newspapermen today, said: "I am for Mark Hanna for the Republican candidate for President next time, and hope the Republicans will nominate him, but I'm not sure I can control their convention."

"Who would be a good man for the Democrats to nominate?" was asked.

"It's too early to talk about any man for the Democratic nomination," said Mr. Bryan. "I have taken up a line of work and believe I have twenty years ahead of me to carry it out."

Non-Union Men Repel Striking Miners.

Latter Marched Against Maritime Mines.

Serious Trouble Looked For For Today—Unionists Are Gathering.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

MATTEWAN (W. Va.) June 20.—Strained relations between the union and non-union miners resulted in bloodshed. Today several hundred union miners, who are on strike marched in a body against the Maritime mines of this place, where non-union men were at work. They tried to effect an entrance, but the operators, with twenty guards, armed with Winchesters, blocked the entrance. The non-union miners were headed by Superintendent Lambert, and when the union men persisted in their attempt he gave the command to fire. Fully fifty shots were fired. Boyd Martin and Riley Johnson were fatally shot, and Sam Artrip was dangerously wounded. The union men did not return the fire, but dispersed.

All the union miners throughout Mingo are collecting to get here tomorrow. Serious trouble is expected when they again try to effect an entrance to the Maritime mines. Sheriff Hatfield is on the scene with fifty deputies, and says he proposes to do his duty.

TROUBLE IN SEATTLE LUMBER CIRCLES.

TRADES COUNCIL MAKES DEMAND FOR NINE HOURS.

Mill Men Say Such a Grant Would Ruin Them Asolutely and the Operatives are Expected to Strike—Fight Likely to Spread to All Coast Mills.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) June 20.—A demand has been made by the Seattle Building Trades Council upon the lumber manufacturers and wood-working shops of Seattle for a reduction of the hours of labor to nine hours a day without a decrease of pay. This demand grew out of the action of the Seattle Lumber Exchange in declaring a boycott on the members of the Trades Council as a means of retaliating for the action of the council in boycotting the lumber manufacturers by the Morans.

Failing in their efforts to enforce their demands, the Trades Council will probably order all of the local mill operatives out. This will result in a shut-down of all the city mills and all the lumber mills throughout the State of Washington will, in all probability, support the local mills in their fight, even to the extent of refusing to furnish lumber to Seattle contractors affiliated with the Building Trades Council. This will cause building operations in the city to practically cease, throwing some 5000 men engaged in building operations and 1000 men employed in sawmills and other wood-working shops in the city out of work.

The mill men are strongly organized and propose to fight a battle to the bitter end, even if it involves a shut-down of indefinite length. They say that as the larger proportion of their product is for export and comes directly into competition with the product of other mills throughout this State and Oregon, this is the only course left them. It is impossible for them to grant the demands of the men, they say, for such a concession would cut down the capacity of the mills at least 50 per cent., taking away all the profits of the industry, if not actually compelling them to run at a loss.

The State Metal Trades' Association has held a meeting, in which it denounced the spirit behind all strikes and lockouts, and today announce that work will begin in all shops Monday. Moran's ship yards are already running with non-union men, and armed guards patroling.

IRON TRADE REVIEW.

STRIKE DID NO DOMAGE.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CLEVELAND (O.) June 20.—The Iron Trade Review discussing market conditions this week, says:

"Purchases of pig iron, chiefly Bessemer, in the Pittsburgh district, by two important consumers have given a better tone to the market and there are indications that it is on the verge of a buying movement. Upward of 100,000 tons of Bessemer and gray forge iron were taken in the week's purchases, deliveries for the majority of the tonnage extending only through the next two months.

A better feeling with considerable inquiry is reported from foundry iron centers, though so far as business has been closed, sellers have nothing to boast of in the way of prices. Southern foundry irons are from $1 to $1.25 below the level of market sales and foundry iron in central western districts has been offered at from .75 to $1 below the top prices of the early months of the year.

There is no doubt as to the record breaking consumption of pig iron. Apart from the statistics from which an apparent consumption at a yearly rate of 16,700,000 tons is figured, the urgency with which producers are being pressed for the delivery of iron indicates that consumers have unusually small amounts in stock. From the foundries inquiries for from three to six months' supply, are beginning to come in and the prospects are that active buying can be reported before the end of the month.

The machinists' strike has not made a considerable in-road into consumption as yet, and reports indicate that the number of men at work is being increased week by week. However, at important centers the deadlock is still unchanged and the continued idleness of important plants will have its effect upon the call for iron and steel in time.

RESTRICTION IN BRICKS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, June 20.—State's Attorney Dineen today signed a petition in quo warranto attacking the charter of the Chicago Masons and Builders' Association on the ground that the association restricts its members to the purchase of brick and stone from certain companies which belong to the Chicago Pressed Brick Association The State contends that this restriction is detrimental to competitive trade.

HANNA ON HARMONY AMONG REPUBLICANS.

SAYS IT IS WHAT WOULD PLEASE THE PRESIDENT.

Talk from the Senator Has Good Effect at Cleveland, O.—Contrary to Expectation Harmony Prevailed at the County Convention.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CLEVELAND, June 20.—Contrary to general expectation, harmony prevailed at the Republican County Convention today. Senator Hanna occupied a seat on the platform, and made a strong speech in favor of peace between the two factions of the party.

"Seldom has there been any campaign," he said, "of such importance as last year's, bearing on questions of such moment, and this year it is the same. It will have great bearing on the President's work, and we should uphold him. This year we elect a Legislature to choose a successor to my distinguished colleague, Senator Foraker, and we should be united in the demand that he be sent back. The legislature that chooses his successor will also redistrict the State, and on this hangs the fate of at least five members of Ohio's Congressional delegation.

"It is needless to tell what the Republican party has done for the country in the past years. It is not necessary for me to place McKinley in the first ring of Presidents. He is not only the President, but a fellow-citizen and a friend. If anything would please him, it would be that this talk of harmony is not superficial. For myself, such a wish comes from the bottom of my heart.

"The Republican party has honored me beyond my merits. In 1896 on the turn of events hung the prosperity and the success of our country. New issues had been raised, and many honest Republicans were led astray. No argument is so strong as an object lesson. The Republican party promised the country if McKinley was elected on the St. Louis platform all promises of prosperity would be fulfilled. They were fulfilled. The renewed confidence of the people came with the fulfillment. Let us give notice to the opposition in Ohio and in the United States that the Republican ranks are filing up and preparing for the battle of 1904. Let this be the notice to the State and the United States."

The nominations subsequently made were pretty evenly divided between the two factions of the party.

CAPITAL STOCK TAXABLE.

New York Court of Appeals Decides Foreign Corporations May Be So Taxed in That State.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ALBANY (N. Y.) June 20.—The Court of Appeals has handed down a very important decision in the case of the people ex. rel. A. Klipstein & Co., vs. J. W. S. Roberts, State Controller, that a foreign corporation is taxable on its capital stock under the corporation law of this State if it transacts business in this State, although the business is in the nature of interstate traffic. The case will probably be carried to the United States Supreme Court for final determination.

He asked to be excused from the commission, but the lay delegates will never consent to his withdrawal from that body.

TARRIED AT WASHINGTON.

Pan-American Party in National Capital.

Times Train Got There Ahead of Time.

Tourists Visit White House, the Capitol and Other Public Buildings.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) June 12, 1901.—Our itinerary says we are due in Washington "early a.m. June 10." We did better than that, however. We arrived at 10 p.m. on the night of the 9th. The arrangement was that we should remain on the train over night and go to our hotel early in the morning. But there were not many in the party who were content to go to bed without a preliminary run up town. The night was warm; a breath of fresh air and a look at the beautiful Capital City by electric light were drawing cards. In company with several of the excursionists, I took a stroll up (or is it down?) Pennsylvania avenue as far as the Treasury building, circumvigated that immense structure, and had a peep at the White House and grounds. It was after midnight when our party turned in and we would not have done so then if we had not been afraid of arrest for vagrancy or breaking some strait-laced rule about late wandering. Our appetites for sightseeing were only whetted.

We are charmingly located here at the Hotel Normandie, corner of Fifteenth and I street, facing McPherson Square—a fresh and fragrant little park. The building is a tall modern brick, and it affords all the conveniences and luxuries which the most exacting demand in a hostelry. During the sessions of Congress this is headquarters for big guns in politics, and, no doubt, a great deal of important statecraft has been devised within these historic walls. James G. Blaine was the first star boarder after the hotel was fitted up, and a large engraving of him has the post of honor in the main sitting-room. He leased an entire floor for himself, family and servants, paying for his entertainment the sum of $1200 a month. That was when he filled the post of Secretary of State. No wonder the hotel people keep his memory green! The Normandie is especially popular with our California delegation. Senator White stopped here during his incumbency, and Senator Bard followed suit. I think Senator Perkins also stops here. Two of our party were given the suite occupied by Speaker Henderson during the last session of Congress. You may be sure that a hotel which attracts such guests is able to offer the most substantial comforts and the most beautiful appointments. But when all is said, the table service does not come up to that which we have in our own dining car. (This may be taken as a compliment to the Harvey system!)

We were delighted to meet Charles W. Otis on the morning after our arrival. His old friends insist on calling him "Charlie," although he is growing a little bare spot a-top, and must have cut his forty-fifth notch on the stick. He is a member of the big Government Printing Office force, where he has been for the past six years. Mr. Otis has been with us a good deal during our two days' stay and has rendered most invaluable service in showing us about the city and through the government buildings. He seems to know everybody in official position, and he makes our way smooth.

Monday morning we sallied forth in a body, our first objective point being the Capitol. Capt. Kennedy (a former Californian, by the way,) who is in charge of the authorized guide service, took us in hand in the grand rotunda and divided us up into two or three groups in order to facilitate the expedition. We saw all of the sights that are available at this off season and brought up again in the grand rotunda, where we sounded the echo and tried the whispering gallery. The hall of Congress we found in a generally torn-up condition, owing to the fact that contractors are putting in a new heating and ventilating device, and preparing to lay a new floor. I hope nobody expects me to give a description of this noble structure, or even to portray the feelings which it inspired. The task is beyond me. When one recalls that the building is 740 feet long and covers about three and a half acres of ground, it is plain that nothing short of a book could give an adequate description of the Capitol and its contents, with a passing glance at its associations.

After looking through the Capitol we visited the White House, and had a half hour to inspect and admire the grand reception-room. Secretary Cortelyou came down from his office and chatted a little while with Mrs. Otis and other members of the party whom he had recently met in Los Angeles. Had it not been for the serious illness of Mrs. McKinley, the President would undoubtedly have accorded us an informal audience, the secretary said. The White House is itself a noble old structure, and the grounds are very beautiful.

In the afternoon of Monday we broke up into smaller parties and visited various points of interest, including the Washington Monument, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the grounds of the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Smithsonian Institution. The time was too limited to allow of anything more than a passing glance at a small section of the National Museum. One needs a week to look through it with any degree of comprehension. Some of our party climbed the 995 stone steps of the monument to the very top, the elevator being out of order.

Tuesday we took a carriage drive as a party through the park system, the government grounds, out to the Soldiers' Home and through some of the finest residence streets of the city. We first called at the Department of Engraving and Printing, where we were pleasantly met by Col. Meredith, the superintendent, and by Gen. Van H. Bukey, disbursing agent. Dividing into small groups, we were taken by lady guides through the immense establishment and saw the process of printing money and stamps. There are some 2700 employés in the building. Such a hive of workers I have never before seen. The drive through the parks and public grounds and out to the Soldiers' Home was charming beyond description. It is hard to picture even on canvas by the hand of a master, the beautiful green awards, the hills and glens covered with native timber, the terraces, the pastures of flowers, the hedge rows. The home provided for disabled veterans of the United States army seems to be as beautiful a haven as could be provided for anybody on this earth.

ITALIAN CONSUL WARNED.

English-speaking Anarchists Instruct New York Diplomatic Officer to Call Off Paterson Spies.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YRK, June 20.—The Italian Consul, Giovanni Branchi, has received the following letter from a committee of English-speaking anarchists who held a meeting here this week:

"To the Italian Cenzul: Knownig the temper of the Paterson comrades, we, the English-speaking anarchists of New York and vicinity, would earnestly request you to desist from employing spies any further. We fear that if persisted in this may lead to bloodshed, which we deplore.

"THE COMMITTEE,

"New York, June 18, 1901."

The meeting was attended by leading members of the anarchist group in Philadelphia, Providence and Boston. Four of the nine men at the meeting are physicians. The meeting was called because of threats made at a meeting of Paterson anarchists held Monday night.

It was decided to send a letter to the Consul-General. The English-speaking anarchists had made an agreement with the anarchists in Paterson by which the latter were to commit no act of violence for seven days. When that period has elapsed it will be known whether the Italian Consul has decided to abandon the spy system, which it is said has been in operation since Bresci assassinated King Humbert.

When the Italian Consul was seen at his office he said: "It is an anonymous letter."

He declined to give any interview, and when asked if he feared any violence he laughed, but said nothing.

BAFFLES ICE MAN.

Chicago Woman Discovers a Way to Prevent Delivery of Short-weight Pieces.

[Chicago News:] Every housewife will be interested in a simple formula to detect those icemen who are inclined to deliver short-weight chunks, which has been discovered by Mrs. Caroline A. Biley of the Cummings apartment building, Grand Boulevard and Fifty-first street. Since the ice trust began to force its prices soaring skyward residents of the Cummings apartment house declare their daily deliveries of ice have grown correspondingly less in weight. They knew that City Sealer Quinn had forced the ice companies to attach a scale to each wagon, but they never could detect the iceman in the act of resorting to one of them to weigh his ice. He merely guessed off the chunk and let it go at that, despite the protests of the consumer, say the patrons.

Mrs. Biley apparently suffered in silence until one day recently she announced that she had discovered a scheme to detect short weights. She made each housewife in the immense house happy by making her a present of the formula, and here it is:

Measure your block of ice and multiply the dimensions — width, breadth and length—as expressed in inches and then divide the result by thirty. The quotient should represent the number of pounds the block of ice will weigh.

In talking of her plan, Mrs. Biley said: "My fifty-pound block of ice was only about forty and forty-one pounds. After I exposed the shortage to the iceman by my scheme he saw that he could no longer fool me and since then my blocks have been full weight."

"It is a daisy scheme," ejaculated City Sealer Quinn.

Semi-Annual Sale Knit Underwear--Two More Days

LITTLE MARGARET TAKEN TO JAIL.

Through all her wonderful adventures, little Margaret clung to her 10-cent piece to the last.

Margaret is a grave young woman of six, with big brown eyes, and hair of tawny-yellow brown.

When she is older, Margaret will be dangerous, for she takes a grave interest in your affairs, and thinks you quite wonderful, and that kind is the worst ever. A girl who thinks every man she meets is wonderful ought to be put under bonds to keep the peace.

Yesterday Margaret made a voyage into the world and everybody loved her.

She went on the cars to visit her aunt; and there accumulated a dime to organize a subsidized expedition to a cake store.

On the way, an absolutely-entrancing kitten crossed her path, and Margaret gave chase.

Somehow, she wound up in the middle of all the roar of Spring street where Temple street cuts in at the junction.

It was all so bewildering and so cruel and big that Margaret cried. Margaret isn't the crying kind, either. Of course there are times.

But when the strange lady brought her to the Police Station she wasn't crying any more. She kept a firm grip on the skirt of the rescue expedition, and looked the police captain over with a gravity that was disconcerting.

They hear lost children that howl bloody murder by the hour, but they never had one like Margaret before.

"You won't be afraid to stay here?" said the lady, who knew very well she would be.

They were behind the desk, and the lady was bidding her good-by.

Margaret took a tighter grip on the skirt and looked up at her pitifully; then she suddenly let go and turned those big, solemn, inquiring eyes on the captain.

The captain is a bachelor; he fled.

The desk clerk, two station officers, the driver of the patrol wagon, and two reporters, all became suitors to Margaret.

The station officer won her; he had candy.

Crafty little minx, she thought of course that his making out subpoenas was the most absorbing thing she ever saw, and he rose in the public estimation.

When some one closed in to consult with the station officer, she crept in under his elbow and assisted by making little taffy marks on the subpoenas.

She didn't say anything, but once as a special concession, she showed a reporter how far she could draw out her gum. Margaret felt perfectly at home.

Presently the chain gang came stumping in and a gentlemen who is doing sixty days for vagrancy did a double shuffle for Margaret's benefit. She was simply lost in admiration, and jilted the station officer on the spot.

But they dragged the unlucky fellow off to his dungeon cell.

Margaret's next love was a big man with a gold-banded cap, who sat at a most fascinating desk all over shiny things, and he let Margaret play with the police signal system.

Oh, Margaret could have had the roof off the station if she had wanted it.

By and by, when she was standing in the middle of the room contentedly watching the wheels go round as still as a mouse, there came another little woman who looked like Margaret, only heaps of years older.

There were no glad cries about this. The grave little woman said quietly to the grave little girl, "I thought the police would get you some day."

Margaret contemplated her judgmatically for a moment. Then they both smiled.

Margaret didn't say anything, but she triumphantly held up one grimy little hand, all taffy, licked clean in streaks. In it something shiny caught the light. It was Margaret's dime.

SAN DIEGO AWAITING LOS ANGELES ELKS.

GREAT PREPARATIONS MADE FOR BASEBALL GAME.

George W. Marston Laid Up by a Stingaree—Glad Hand Ready for Turnfest Visitors—Bowers Prospecting for Desert Oil—Coronado Notes.

SAN DIEGO, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] The greatest interest prevails in the visit of the Los Angeles lodge of Elks to this city, Saturday and Sunday. Jack Dodge will go to Los Angeles tomorrow for the purpose of escorting the Los Angeles brethren and their friends to town. The visitors will be met at the station Saturday afternoon by the City Guard Band, and a delegation of Elks. They will be taken to the Horton House for dinner, and from there to the baseball grounds, at Bay View Park, in special decorated cars. The band will give a concert and then the baseball nines of the two lodges will lock antlers for the big game. Heretofore Los Angeles has been too many for the San Diego men, in the baseball line, but this time it may be different. According to all accounts the Los Angeles Elks will need to bring down their best cards, as some of the recent candidates for the honors of Elkdom down this way are baseball players of the first water. After the game the visitors will be given a banquet, and part of the evening will be passed in a social session at Elks' Hall, which is to be decorated with electric lights and in other ways. Sunday will be passed at Coronado.

MARSTON'S MISHAP.

George W. Marston, a prominent business man here, was painfully stung by a stingaree while bathing in the bay from the San Diego Rowing Clubhouse today. His injuries are very painful and will confine him to the house several days.

SAN DIEGO BREVITIES.

Five hundred people are expected here tomorrow for the fourth Turnfest of the Pacific Coast. Turner Hall has been decorated for the event. The address of welcome at the hall tomorrow afternoon will be by the Mayor, the response being by one of the visiting delegates, and the Frauen Verein will serve lunch.

Papers of incorporation of the Prince Oil Company were filed here today, the capital stock being set down as $200,000, and $1000 as the amount subscribed. The directors are: S. G. Ames, J. H. Ames, J. S. Lytle, A. T. Morrison, W. R. Guy.

Mayor Frary has caused the abolition of the custom of firing the sunset salute, opposite the barracks, on H street. The cannon is near the road, and in the past many horses have been frightened by the noise.

At the Superior Court this afternoon Judge Torrance appointed George W. Hazzard administrator of the estate of William Kilpe, for which office there has been a sharp contest.

Dr. Stephen Bowers of Los Angeles, State Mining Examiner and Geologist, left this morning for the Carriso Creek section of the desert to investigate oil indications.

A movement has been started for an association of the graduates of the Russ High School. A mass meeting of the graduates is to be held the evening of the 29th inst.

OUR NAVAL RESERVE MAKES A SHOWING.

LOS ANGELES SECTION OF ENGINEER CORPS INSPECTED.

Capt. Nerney, Commanding Naval Militia of California, Compliments the Men on Their Good Appearance—Short Cruises in the Future.

Capt. Thomas A. Nerney, commanding the naval militia of California, inspected the Los Angeles section of the Engineer Division last night in its quarters in the old Athletic Club gymnasium.

This is the first inspection that has been held since the Naval Reserve was separated from the National Guard of California.

The Naval Reserve is now an entirely independent organization. A bill was introduced in the last Congress to make it a national organization under the direct orders of the Navy Department.

California has seven divisions, making in all about 600 officers and men. The organization is not top heavy with gold lace, like the National Guard. The whole reserve is under the command of a captain.

In the course of a short address made to the men last night, Capt. Nerney stated that the Pinta is now being repaired at San Diego for the use of the southern Naval Reserve men, and that a short cruise will probably be taken in her every few months during the year from this on.

A launch at San Pedro is being fitted out for the benefit of the Los Angeles engineer section at an expense of $1300.

Next September, the Naval Reserve will go out for a cruise of eight days either in the U.S.S. Wisconsin or the U.S.S. Philadelphia, whichever is the most available.

If the whole reserve can make as creditable an appearance as the engineer section did at the inspection and muster last night, it will be valuable material for the navy to fall back on.

There were thirty-two men present, under command of Lieut. M. Ray Custerison. Seven men were absent.

As a knowledge of machinery is necessary to make a man eligible for enlistment in the engineer division, of which one section is located here and one in San Francisco, the standard of enlisted men is unusually high in point of intelligence.

Severe physical tests have been adopted by the local section for recruits. The effect of that is very easy to see, too.

A criticism might be offered in regard to the individual set-up of some of the men, however. Were it another kind of an organization, instead of one in which much study is required, and a certain familiarity absolutely necessary in the relations between the officers and men from the very nature of the technical instruction, a few remarks might be made regarding rigidity of discipline. As it is, the men are respectful, if a trifle sociable, and seem to be thoroughly interested in their work.

Capt. Nerney paid the men a high compliment last night on their appearance and good showing.

He promised to do something for them in the way of equipment in the near future, in addition to the launch mentioned.

The section is now armed with old style Lee magazine rifles.

The inspection last night was attended by Paymaster E. J. Louis of San Diego.

Capt. Nerney himself came from San Diego originally. He organized there the first Naval Reserve division in the State in 1891. He had before that been lieutenant-colonel of the Seventh Regiment, N.G.C.

At the close of the inspection, the commissioned officers went out to the recention at the Harvard School by special invitation.

The city press should help the Horticultural Commissioners to bring about the destruction of scaly shade trees. Supervisors preparing an ordinance forbidding the importation of vines and trees from infested districts. Progress of scale extermination at Rivera rapid and effective....Lamanda vineyardists petition for the exclusion of grape cuttings, plants, etc., from phylloxera districts....Nurserymen and florists' association consider the improvement of quarantine and inspection rules governing the shipment of trees and plants....Plotting the orchards of Inglewood begun preparatory to beginning war upon purple scale....Time to begin the extermination of Russian thistle....Owners of old, unsightly trees should notify the commission to have them removed. Downey is in line to fight purple scale. Horticultural Commissioners dealing promptly with the outbreak of tree-root fungus.

Feeding the Yankees.

Los Angeles county will not always be content with its lot as one of the leading growers of citrus fruits among the Pleiades of Southern California, but proposes to invade the field of bean growing. This season, near the city of Los Angeles, about one hundred and fifty acres of beans will be cultivated. Tests have been made in one or two of the unirrigated sections and have given courage for a larger trial of beans. It is said that the lima variety did not succeed well in the preliminary trial, so Ventura will not look upon this county as a rival as long as the limas will not grow. Next fall the experimenters will have some definite experience in this line of cultivation. One hundred and fifty acres scattered about the community, growing in different soils and under different climatic conditions, should demonstrate whether there are other soils adapted to the bean besides those of Ventura and Santa Barbara.

Catch the Late Worm.

Growers of apples and pears should now be preparing to catch the worms that failed to get a dose of poison from the spring spraying. The codling moth is many-brooded in Southern California. The worms are now leaving the fruit, seeking a place to pupate. From the 1st of July until the apples are gathered there will be fresh eggs every morning. It is very difficult to control these later broods by spraying. It is almost impossible to make the poison stay upon the smooth surface of the fruit long enough to catch one in a thousand. From an unknown source I find the following:

"How best to control these later broods is still a matter of experiment. One of the best methods is to tie pieces of gunny sack, folded once, around the trunk of the tree. The worms on leaving the fruit preferably seek the trunk of the tree to pupate. Concealment appearing to be the object sought, they readily enter the folds of the gunny sack, and may easily be found and killed. These bands should be put upon the trees the 1st of June and carefully inspected and the worms destroyed at least once in every ten days. If a longer period is allowed to elapse the moths will have issued, and the purpose of the bands will have been defeated.

"This banding system may have the appearance of entailing a heavy expense; those, however, who have expressed an opinion after using them extensively, state that the expense during the season need not exceed 4 cents per tree."

May Be Exterminated.

Referring to a "note" in last week's issue of this department, which treated of the new fungus disease, Rev. C. J. K. Jones of this city writes the fungus, "which has been described as Dematophora necatrix (Hartig,) and as the Rosellinia necatrix by Massee and others, is a great scourge in portions of the continent of Europe, especially among the vineyards. Hartig recommends the use of creosote. Massee says that the French 'expose the base of the trunk as far down as can be done without injury to the tree, and powder both trunk and surrounding soil liberally with sulphur, repeating the process at intervals.' It might be well for some of our orchardists to try this experiment. I would also suggest digging up the infected trees, being sure to pull out all the roots, and burn them. It might also be of benefit to give the grove a good dressing of land plaster. In this connection it occurred to me that a profitable investment for our progressive and intelligent orchardists would be the purchase of a microscope with a 1-inch, ⅓-inch and ⅙-inch objective, and an 'A' and 'B' eyepiece. The cost, with a book of instructions, need not exceed $60. With such an outfit, the diseases as also the normal structure of plants, can be observed, and, as definite knowledge shall grow, be determined. The pursuits of the horticulturists and agriculturists these days are supremely intellectual in all their phases and interests; they are thoroughly scientific, and no occupation or calling is more so."

It is not likely that the new fungus will become a scourge to Southern California. For the same reason that great pines, oaks and poplars do not grow in our valley soils, the fungus may find it difficult to get a firm hold. It is only a plant of a low order, and must have the proper conditions to render it exuberant. The fungus is parasitic, of course, and depends upon its host for sustenance; but the trees that are affected near this city have proven resistant for seven or eight years, awaiting the proper conditions of soil and possibly of the health of the trees before its vegetative parts could multiply fast enough to poison and finally kill the roots of the trees. There are at least two strong points against the spread of this disease. The upland soils of this section are so porous and well drained that all classes of fungi find them a difficult field. They cannot injure trees unless favorable opportunities occur. However, the malady should be watched with great vigilance and stamped out wherever it is found.

Wire Worms Abundant.

General complaint of the destructive presence of wire worms is heard from the farmers down toward the coast this season. I have seen potatoes literally honeycombed by these pests, and T. J. Luccock of Clearwater has sent in a sample of his potato crop, which contains about fifty of these worms in one little tuber. As is the case with most pests, the season has much to do with their multiplication. One reason the soils of the high, dry upland valleys are not infected like those of the damp lands is that the hot sun and desiccating air are not favorable to the production of such insects. Another reason is, very likely, that the soils of the mountain valleys contain more potash, artificially and naturally distributed, and, hence, they carry their own vermicide. It is a fact that swamp lands and marshy places contain very little, often no potash whatever, and there is a hint in this to the farmers of the damp lands who suffer from the pest of worms. It is worth the trial to give these infected soils a good dose of potash in some commercial form, especially if the lands are reasonably well drained. It will have a tendency to retard the vegetation till the days of the wire worm are over, which will be early in the summer, and give the crops a chance later in the season. Fall plowing, rotation of crops and the introduction of insect poisons may lessen the liability of damages from these worms, but it must be admitted that there is no very effective treatment known in cases where the soil is moist, free from elements injurious to insect life or in other ways calculated to encourage their permanent occupation of the land. As boys we knew the wire worms in their adult state as click beetles, blacksmiths or snapping bugs.

Then and Now.

Only nine years ago a suit was commenced in one of the Superior courts of Los Angeles to prevent the planting of 48,000 peach trees at Lancaster, imported from Delaware and known to be infected with black aphis and peach-tree borers. The old account of it states that Commissioner John Scott heard that a carload of deciduous fruit trees had passed through this city en route for the Antelope Valley. He telegraphed to his inspector, A. B. Cox, to look out for the trees and to reinspect them, even if accompanied by a certificate of cleanliness. Cox replied that he had inspected the trees and found them in fine condition, and that he would in no case interfere with the trees for fear he would be held for damage. He lost his job at once, Mr. Scott having ascertained by other means that the trees were full of aphis and borer. The trees were quarantined and the suit begun, as indicated, in March, 1892.

The Fairmont Land and Water Company, which had imported the trees, paid no attention to the quarantine, but scattered the stock upon their lands, and began preparations for planting. In the suit the entire force of the District Attorney's office was drawn upon, and the Attorney-General, W. H. H. Hart, and his deputy also figured in the list of prosecutors, and the proceedings involved temporary injunctions to prevent the planting of the trees, prayers for a declaration of the invoice to be a nuisance and for the destruction of the entire lot of the trees. The laws were very inadequate in those days and Commissioner Scott had to resort to the courts, though an inspection proved that the trees were beyond redemption. In these days the Horticultural Commissioners may condemn such an outfit of stock and immediately destroy it. But we give all honor to the pioneers who fought these battles and left a practice in which the courts would no doubt now sustain the most radical measure, if applied in good faith and under proper evidence of infection. Defective as are our quarantine regulations now, they are a great improvement over those of 1892.

Is it a Trust?

Some time ago the California Raisin Growers' Association sued Seropian Brothers on the allegation that they were about to offer some 250,000 pounds of seeded raisins at less than list prices of the association, that organization claiming the right to dispose of the fruit or have it sold under its order. Seropian Brothers denies that the association have control of the fruit and allege: (1) That a union was formed between the association and the packers for the purpose of forcing up the price of raisins, alleging; (2) that the packers put their own crops into the hands of the raisin association by an absolute contract, these contracts to be void unless 90 per cent. of the raisins was signed over; (3) that the 90 per cent. was obtained, and the association then proceeded to fix an arbitrary price on raisins in excess of their real value; (4) that Seropian Brothers originally owned the raisins and, while that firm signed them over to the association under the packers' contract, the association has no claim upon the fruit. The defense in its seventh answer sums the whole proposition up by alleging that all the contracts are a conspiracy in restraint of trade, to stifle competition, and are contrary to public policy and void. This is the first attempt to place the fruit associations of the North in the category of trusts, and the outcome of the suit at law will be watched with intense interest by all fruit organizations which attempt, by combination, to fix an arbitrary, f.o.b., price upon their fruit. If Seropian Brothers win, the raisin and the prune combinations will be destroyed or forced to adopt the plan of the citrus associations of Southern California, which do not attempt to monopolize the orange and lemon business. The difference between the policies of the northern and southern organizations is simple. The former attempt to force the trade to pay an arbitrary price whether the fruit is worth it or not; whether the consumers are able to pay it or not. The latter place their products before their customers and by mutual agreement fix the price upon terms that will not injure the customers nor wrong the producers. It is the difference between monopoly and free barter and sale.

The Use of California Lemons.

Although it has been in print some time, I have just received a copy of the pamphlet entitled "How to Use California Lemons." The booklet has been issued in Thousands, and is of value to every lemon grower and shipper in the State. This compilation is the work of the Southern California Fruit Exchange, the idea originating with Dr. Gardner, a member of that organization at Colegrove. Under sixty-six subheads are given suggestions, recipes, remedies and precautions, and it has certainly taxed the memory of the author to group them properly. They are arranged under the heads of "The Lemon in Sickness," "For the Sideboard," "In the Kitchen," "In the Laundry" and "For the Dressing Table." Four recipes are given for curing colds; the lemon is a cure for billousness, light fevers; serves as a tonic, is good for catarrh, hoarseness and rheumatism. In light drinks its variety of uses is innumerable, and in the culinary department every good cook may imagine the multitude of good things suggested, lemon pie taking the precedence for popularity. For softening water, removing stains and for general laundry purposes the book contains numerous recipes and applications. It is better than soap for the dressing table, for the skin, hair, teeth and gums it is excellent, and withal is a wholesome fruit for a large variety of dietary, medicinal, food and cleansing purposes. In the entire sixty-six uses to which the pamphlet says the California lemon may be applied, not one is given that is not sensible and helpful. A wide circulation of this compilation would increase the demand for one of our most valuable products, and it is given out free by the exchange solely as an advertisement for the California lemon.

Defending the Exchange.

In answering a letter printed in The Times from a San Fernando correspondent two weeks ago in which the writer challenges any grower at San Dimas or Lordsburg to explain certain features of the exchange's policy, M. B. Curtis of the latter place writes under date of June 14 that he has a ranch of 110 acres, with twenty-three acres of Washington navels, from which were produced 5300 boxes of fruit last year, and that his fruit was marketed through the exchange. The vital points in his letter are the claims that the exchange has rescued the citrus industry from the clutches of the middlemen; that, locally, the growers never fail to receive profitable returns under the present arrangement; in the past years, prior to the organization of the exchange, the growers often "received their returns in red ink;" his exchange has taken in 200 cars of outside fruit whose producers could not dispose of the fruit at any price. Mr. Curtis says that the San Antonio exchange last year sold $885,000 worth of fruit at an expense of 3½ per cent., the packing expenses being only 28 cents per box, and the loss from bad accounts but $200.

The Lordsburg writer believes in the selling-delivered plan, because there are but few f.o.b. sales, the fruit being turned down for the most trivial causes if it arrives upon a falling market. He holds that the losses sustained this year through failure of fruit dealers is more than the exchange would lose in thirty years from uncollectable accounts. Mr. Curtis speaks highly of the administration of the eastern agents of his organization and expresses his firm belief in the efficiency of co them wadeh them fawr ficacy of coöperation as applied to the packing and selling of citrus fruits.

Melons a Fruit.

The colored man has never been willing to class the luscious "watermillion" as a vegetable, and on this point the United States government has been forced to come to the darkeys' point of view. The decision has been made by the General Board of Appraisers on a case arising at Nogales upon the right to import melons as vegetables. The board decided that "the melon is known technically, popularly and commercially as a fruit, and therefore dutiable as a green fruit rather than as a vegetable." The same view is taken, technically, by the Department of Agriculture, and we may now rest assured that the status of the watermelon, muskmelon, cantaloupe and their whole kindred has been raised a few points officially and permanently. Indio may now claim to be one of the most promising fruit sections of the State without a tree in sight except the few cottonwoods in the vicinity of the depot.

Somewhat Personal.

It may seem a little out of order, but I shall not refer to it again. It relates strictly to the success of this department, however, and you pardon is asked on that ground. I have received several letters from fruit growers asking when and where the editor of the agricultural department could be "seen." ALLEGED GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP SCHEME.

A dispatch from Denver, Colo., credits the Times of that city with a statement to the effect that "a gigantic scheme is under way to transfer the railroads of the United States to the government." The somewhat vague authority of "a western financier" is given for the statement that "within a few years the Rockefeller, Harriman, Vanderbilt, Gould, and Morgan interests will turn over to the government every line in the United States, to the total value of about ten billion dollars; a string of banks to be controlled by the same interests, and to finance the deal."

All this is, probably, merely surmise, without substantial foundation in truth. If any such scheme is on foot, it has been kept extremely quiet, not to have reached the public knowledge ere this. And there is a breezy indefiniteness about the whole matter which savors strongly of the achievements of saffron-hued journalism.

It is easy enough to talk about "turning over to the government" every line of railway in the United States; but it takes two—and sometimes more than two—to make a bargain. So far as has been heard from, the government of the United States has not been consulted in this gigantic undertaking. And when it comes to a final show-down the people of the United States will be likely to have something to say about the alleged deal, involving an expenditure of "about ten billion dollars," or about one-tenth the value of all property in the United States. It will probably be found to be a rather difficult matter to "turn over" these properties to the American people—who are the government—unless the American people are willing to take them.

That government ownership of railroads and telegraphs will eventually become an accomplished fact is not outside the bounds of possibility. But this will happen a long time in the future, if at all. In the meantime, there is no denying that railroad management and "promotion" are developing new phases and new conditions which form a highly interesting economic study, and which unquestionably presage many changes of very great importance. The same may be said of many other, if not most, of the great industries. Combination, or consolidation, is the order of the hour, and there is no present foreseeing of the eventual outcome.

Many Socialists claim that the development of modern combine, or trust, is merely the preliminary step to the realization of their theories of government, and they advance some very ingenious arguments in support of this view. At all events, the railroad business, like all other forms of industry, appears at the present time to be in a transition state, and tending toward some indeterminate evolution of the future. Just what will be the finality cannot be foretold with any degree of accuracy. It may be government ownership, or it may not be. But the industrial revolution through which we are passing is undoubtedly progress, not retrogression. The world is not going backward. Civilization is not a failure, nor is it destined to become a failure. That which may seem like retrogression, viewed in the insufficient light of the present, will in the clearer light of a more thorough knowledge of conditions, be perceived as a part of the forward movement in the development of human destiny.

REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING.

The local real-estate market is in a remarkably healthy condition just now. At no time since the boom of 1886-87 has there been such an active demand for property as we have witnessed during the past six months. In fact, the amount of business that is now done would, fifteen years ago, have been regarded as a boom, without the unnecessary and objectionable features of brass bands, free lunches, and so forth.

Present real-estate values in Los Angeles are exceedingly moderate, when the resources and prospects of the city are taken into consideration. Shrewd investors have begun to realize this fact, and are quietly picking up choice pieces of real estate. Many of these people—perhaps a majority of them—are outsiders, who have not been long in California, for, as is usual in such cases, our own people too often fail to see advantages and possibilities which are at once apparent to the new arrival.

The increased interest that is taken in real-estate matters in Los Angeles, and the growing importance of the business will be recognized by The Times in making up its real-estate department.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

The fact that the Chinese Exclusion Act will expire by limitation next spring has aroused its advocates to activity, and it is expected that there will be a great effort made to induce Congress to extend the law. At the same time, it is reported that a memorial to the United States government is being prepared by Chinese residents of San Francisco against the Exclusion Act, and that the services of the United States Minister at Washington will be requested to aid the Chinese in their efforts.

The overwhelming majority by which the people of California voted in favor of Chinese exclusion, twenty years ago, leaves no doubt as to the prevailing sentiment in this State on the subject of Chinese exclusion. There has, perhaps, been some modification of public opinion on the question since that vote was taken, but there is no reason to doubt that a great majority of the people of this State are still strongly impressed with the importance of keeping the gates closed against the unrestricted entrance of the tireless little yellow man.

Many alarmist statements have been circulated of late in regard to the great numbers of Chinese who are said to be smuggled into the United States every year, across the frontiers of British Columbia, Canada, and Mexico. That these statements are grossly exaggerated is shown by the figures of the United States census, recently made public by the Federal authorities, according to which the Chinese population of California is considerably smaller than it was ten years ago, which could scarcely be the case if any considerable number of Chinese had been pouring into the country.

In connection with this question of Chinese immigration, an interesting item recently appeared in the press dispatches. An American electrical engineer, connected with cotton mills at Shanghai, was interviewed at New York, and told the reporter that the six large mills there cannot compete, even with their Chinese cheap labor, with the American manufacturers. The originators of the plants in China expected large profits, but by the practice of the most rigid economy they have been unable to earn more than 3 per cent. on their investment. The women in the Chinese mills, the engineer said, are paid 15 cents per day. He explained that competition with American-made goods is unsuccessful because an American operative can do better work, and four times more in a given time than a Chinese. Consequently, American-made products are cutting out Chinese goods in Chinese markets.

This is not the first time the fact has been made clear that low-priced labor is not necessarily cheap labor. Our friend John Bull has of late been wondering how it is that American factories, in which the men are paid two or three times as much as in England, are able to turn out goods at a lower cost. His investigators have about come to the conclusion that the secret is to be found in the higher average intelligence of the American workingman. It is, therefore, probable that we have been inclined to overrate the danger of competition from Chinese labor. Still, it is the popular verdict—and in this case the people are doubtless right—that it would be unwise to let down the bars to promiscuous immigration from the Orient. Indeed, just now, when we are seriously considering the desirability of keeping out low-class immigration from Europe, it would be illogical to open wide the gates on the other side of the continent to a class of people who, whatever their good qualities may be, rarely have the inclination or the ability to become good American citizens.

It is true that there will undoubtedly be strong influences brought to bear in the East in favor of Chinese immigration, but there is little danger that Congress will act against the strongly-expressed wishes of the great West, which section is the most directly interested in this question.

THE CUBAN SUGAR INDUSTRY.

One of the numerous indications that Cuba is making steady progress, notwithstanding the unsettled condition of political affairs in the islands, is found in statements just made public relative to the sugar crop for this season. According to a correspondent of the New York Tribune, who writes from Matanzas, the sugar crop of the island for the present season aggregates, in round numbers, about 600,000 tons, and this will bring not far from $30,000,000. The payment for the crop has been an important factor in reducing the unfavorable trade balance against the island. Not all the crop has been ground, some planters preferring to wait until another season, in the expectation of better prices.

The correspondent states that the acreage of cane to be planted for the coming season is about one-third greater than that of last year, and the prospects are that the product will reach 800,000 to 850,000 tons in the season of 1902. "In this, the great central sugar belt," says the Tribune's correspondent, "another year will bring most of the plantations up to their normal production before the insurrection. There are still many estates around Matanzas which have not been cleared and replanted, but they grow fewer with each month, and the probability is that their distressed owners either will be closed out under foreclosure proceedings or will be able to finance their plantations throughout the year without aid."

In the Cardenas district most of the estates have fully recovered from the effects of the war, and Cardenas has even gone ahead of Matanzas in its shipments. Most of the lands in what is known as the "bad belt," the correspondent says, "are held out as bargains to Americans, who think that all sugar lands in Cuba are the same, and who sometimes are led into buying wherever they see cane growing." Here is still another distinct evidence of Cuban progress.

As to the changing social conditions, the correspondent writes interestingly, as follows:

"The Cuban planter is going through an industrial and a social revolution. The old baronial estates are passing away. The individual planter is becoming less and less a factor. He talks of the old-time feudalism just as the southern cotton planters used to talk of it, and he grieves over the new conditions which reduce his own importance, but there is no remedy.

"His hospitality, where he has the means, is as princely as in the past, and if he has been able to get large enough advances on his crops or to find some corner of the plantation which was not already mortgaged he still counts on the season in Paris, London, or Saratoga with his family; but with the creditors pressing him and the new conditions of production to be met, it is only in a few cases that he is able to take this vacation."

"The old order changeth, giving place unto the new." That the sugar-producing industry of Cuba, taking into account the adverse conditions to which it has been subjected during the past few years, has shown such recuperative power as the facts above printed indicate, must be regarded as really remarkable, and as showing great vitality, with the promise, amounting to a virtual certainty, of a vast development in the future—a development limited only by the area and the productive capacity of the sugar-growing regions.

If a satisfactory government be established in Cuba—and the United States forces are not likely to be withdrawn from the island until a satisfactory government has been established—a new and vitalizing energy will be infused into this and all other industries. Millions of capital are awaiting the guaranties which only a stable government can give, to embark in the systematic and general development of the resources of the island. These resources are vast and varied. Under the Spanish régime they remained practically dormant. There was little encouragement to their development under the chronic conditions of misgovernment and incipient revolution which had existed for a generation or more before the American occupation.

When Cuba Libre shall have become an actuality, all the old conditions will practically have passed away, and the era of progress will have been fully inaugurated. Then shall we witness a transformation such as even the Cubans have never dreamed of. The field for enterprise is extensive and inviting, and it is certain to be fully occupied when the right conditions shall have been established.

Everything, however, depends upon the establishment of a safe and stable government in the island. Until this task shall have been fully and satisfactorily accomplished, all else must wait. Appearances indicate that the accomplishment of this much-desired result will not be hopelessly in the future. The era of real Cuban prosperity will date from the inception of a stable government.

Once more let it be understood by all concerned that The Times pays no attention to anonymous letters. They are unworthy of men. Another well-established rule of this journal is frequently forgotten or ignored by careless or verdant correspondents, viz.: The Times does not bind itself to return rejected manuscripts. Authors should therefore keep copies.

DISASTROUS TRIAL TRIP.

Bad Smash-up on New Trolley Line.

Train's Wild Rush Down Steep Grade.

Conductor Clark Has a Hand Cut Off—Manager Smith's Narrow Escape.

A man in the hospital with his left hand gone, two others more or less bruised and shaken up, and a construction train derailed and smashed, is the record of a run made yesterday afternoon over the new line of the electric street railway between Altadena and Rubio Cañon. That the accident did not result more seriously is a miracle, and the two men least hurt are congratulating themselves on their narrow escape from severe injury and possible death.

The accident occurred at 4:20 o'clock at the junction of the Altadena and Mt. Lowe lines in Altadena. A construction train, in charge of General Manager W. H. Smith, who was acting as motorman, and consisting of the new electric motor recently put in service and a flat car loaded with gravel trailing behind, was coming down the steep grade of Lake avenue, at the south end of the Mt. Lowe line, when the brake rod broke, and the cars shot swiftly down the grade. A short distance down the line was a sharp turn in the road, where the line connects with the Altadena road, and at the terrific rate of speed in which the train was running, it was impossible to make the turn. Both cars left the track, and after going a short distance along the ground, turned over on their sides.

Manager Smith and Superintendent F. H. Jones, who were on the motor, jumped from the car in time to save their lives, and escaped with a few bruises. Amos Z. Clark, who was on the flat car, was far less fortunate, however. When the brake rod broke on the motor he grasped the brake of the flat car and tried in vain to stop the momentum of the train. He stayed at his post until the cars toppled over, when he was thrown forward and under the wreck in such a manner that his hand was caught under the heavy mass of iron and severed completely from his arm. It was afterward found in the roadway, an almost unrecognizable mass of flesh and bone.

Clark was taken to Pasadena and placed in a hospital, where the mangled portion of his arm was amputated. He is an unmarried man, about 35 years of age, and is a brother-in-law of General Manager Smith. He has been in the employ of the company about eight months, and for some time had acted as conductor in charge of the construction train. Aside from the loss of his hand, he is suffering from a dislocated shoulder and appears to be bruised generally.

A wrecking crew was put to work immediately after the accident, and late last evening the big motor was replaced upon the track and returned to Pasadena. The cab of the motor is badly smashed, but the damage is otherwise slight.

The road upon which the accident occurred has recently been rebuilt with heavier rails, and it was the intention of the company to run its large cars through from Los Angeles to Rubio without change, in case a trial trip proved the experiment to be safe. It is possible that the accident of yesterday may convince the officials of the road that such a plan is inadvisable.

NEW GAS PLANT.

Illuminant for Salt Lake and Santa Fe Trains Will Be Manufactured in Los Angeles.

D. McG. Gregory of New York, assistant engineer of the Pintsch Compressing Company, is in this city to superintend the building of a plant for the manufacture of the Pintsch gas for the illumination of passenger trains on the Santa Fé and Salt Lake routes. At the present time the compressors on the Santa Fé trains are filled with gas at Kansas City, and must be sufficient to illuminate the train on the run to the Coast and back again to Kansas City. With the addition of the Salt Lake route as a consumer, it will be more economical, and much more satisfactory, to establish a plant in Los Angeles, and fill the compressors at each end of the run.

The gas is made from petroleum, and consequently our local market offers a ready supply of raw material. This gas is largely used on railroad and steamship lines, and where there is no local gas plant, it has been applied to house lighting. It can be compressed to a much greater degree than coal gas, and is also cheaper, but it is open to objections which are not apparent on moving trains and steamboats.

The Pintsch Company has secured ground near the river, about 400 feet south of the First-street viaduct, where it will erect a brick building, 35x50 feet. The industry is not a great one, but will give constant employment to five or six men when once in operation, and will add considerably to the consumption of petroleum.

PRECEDENT FOR RUSSELL.

English Lawyers Think the Noble Lord Will Be Treated Very Well by His Peers.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—A dispatch to the Tribune from London says that the lawyers who have looked up the Cardigan case assert that the prosecuting authorities will not find it easy to convict Earl Russell of bigamy if he be indicted by the grand jury and tried by the House of Lords. The case against Lord Cardigan was conducted by Sir John Campbell in February, 1841, and a hundred or more peers uncovered their heads and pronounced a verdict "not guilty, upon my honor."

Lord Cardigan was indicted for shooting in a duel at Harvey Garnett Phipps Tuckett. The evidence produced before the lords showed that the person shot at bore the name of Harvey Tuckett, but there was none to prove that Harvey Tuckett was Harvey Garnett Phipps Tuckett. This discrepancy was held to be a variance entitling the second duellist to acquittal under the statute. The prosecuting authorities warned by the failure of Sir John Campbell, now have the delicate business of arranging the indictment of Earl Russell under terms which will permit them to provide precise evidence respecting his divorce and marriage in Nevada without the risk of variance when peers are judges and jury. The Nevada records show how delicate the establishment of identity will be.

GUIDES TO "MONONA BREAKERS."

The sea birds you will follow, as fairy guides will follow,
To reach "Monona Breakers" upon the silver strand,
Their white wings dip and glimmer, and flit o'er hill and hollow
Of the blue Pacific billows, all in a golden land,
And tell of One who holds them in the hollow of His hand.

The white clouds you will follow in their aerial motion,
The bright enthralling signals, reflected in the blue,
They drift along the billows, as the white sails of the ocean,
—As true hearts are reflected in other hearts as true,—
The stars are in their hiding, the light is there for you.

The sea waves you will follow, the tone of lute and viol
Will sound in mystic music, that echo doth prolong,
And as you eager listen, and will not know denial,
A wordless psalm will answer, as from a veiled throng,
Deep unto deep replying in one ecstatic song.

The mountains you will follow, the purple glooms and glory,
Where rosy mists of morning along the distance flee,
And all the smiling fancies of old idyllic story
Will gather on the foothills, and wander far and free
Where the dreaming old Sierras look down upon the sea.

The sea birds are the symbols of that which is diviner,
Of song and faith upholden, where billows rise and fall,
They flit like rays of light from the Hand of the Designer,
And the verities of beauty are the enduring thrall,
Where the poised uplifted pinion tells the Love-law over all.

The singing waves are telling in tones of harp and viol
Of the imprisoned music of all earth's silent throng,
But waiting till the shadow shall pass across the dial
The lost chords of the measure of a music deep and strong,
The heavenly exultance of the seraphic song.

The upward reaching mountains repeat the aspiration
That leads the spirit onward through centuries of flight,
Their cloud-encompassed summits are Nature's own oblation,
Their feet are in the dark earth, the silence and the night,
But they reach along the eras onward, upward to the light.

So, through the sunny morning, with the June winds a-blowing,
The dawn light on the roses, and the song light on the spray,
The Ebell Angelenos will surely come foreknowing
Threads bright as Ariadne's are clues along the way!
And a "Monona" welcome assures a happy day.

"Monona," wondrous maiden, when the hearth-fire is lighted,
—So runs the ancient legend of sage historic claim—
The glimmer of her torches do make men truer-hearted
And Friendship gains new vistas from the undying flame.
Her white canoe still wanders and ocean knows her name.

LAURA F. HINSDALE.

THE DAYTON STRIKE.

Statement Recently Made by the National Cash Register Company Regarding the Trouble.

The National Cash Register Company of Dayton, O., under date of June 3, published a statement setting forth the facts regarding the labor trouble at its factory. By this statement it is known that the company had never opposed unions, but had endeavored in many ways, and at no little cost, to better the condition of its employees. The molders, when they quit, were earning from $4 to $4.50 per day of nine hours. They were working on piece work, and their union forbade them to do more work or earn more money. The polishers, 109 in number, were getting from $2.50 to $4 a day, at the rates fixed by their union.

Before the men struck, on May 3, the company had offered to arbitrate, but the reply was that there was "nothing to arbitrate;" that the men would go out, and ten minutes later they went out.

Part of the company's system has been to offer prizes to its workmen for suggestions as to how the quality of its work could be improved, and its cost lessened. The Metal Polishers' Union, which struck, had sent in practically no suggestions. They discouraged any of their number doing so.

In regard to the making of boxes, the company says: "The Amalgamated Woodworkers' discriminate against us in prices in this city. Making boxes for us, they require us to pay $3 per day. Doing the same work of the same time for others in the city, and for our use, they allow $1.50 per day to be paid. That is, to get our work done by other employing union labor in the city costs us less than the union requires us to pay, if we did the work ourselves in our own factory."

"One union in our factory," the statement says, "is the Amalgamated Woodworkers, comprising our bench men, mill men and box-makers, about seventy in number. Another union is the Carpenters' and Joiners', who work around the factory maintaining buildings and fixtures, comprising about eighteen men. These two unions quarreled between themselves about their control of certain work, each claiming to control it. It was none of our affair, but theirs alone; but it took much of our time and obstructed our work. Mr. Kidd, the high official, was called in from Chicago by one of the unions at our request, and an agreement was made which he approved. We complied with it. Thereupon, the other of these unions, whom the decision had gone against, struck on Tuesday, April 16, last, and has been out ever since. This strike was not because of any complaint against us. It delayed and injured our business. These men have been striking and out of our employment, and only for the reason stated, for the last five weeks. They are now out. They claim to hold their places in our factory, but many of them are working for other people while they hold our work tied up."

During the past year the company's drivers formed a union, and struck twice, and by preventing others from delivering coal to the company, nearly stopped the works, not because of any grievance against the company, but because they wanted the company to compel the party from whom it bought coal, to get his drivers unionized. This striking Molders' and Polishers' Union last year compelled the company, in order to escape reinstating men whom it did not require, and to prevent a strike, to pay them their wages for three months for work they did not do at all, and covering time that they did not come to the factory, except to draw their weekly pay.

The molders' union demanded that the company reinstate in its employ four molders, two of whom had been discharged January last for want of work; and two of whom were discharged in April, one for excessive losses in his product, which means bad and incompetent work, and the other for the use of filthy and abusive language in the shop, and for insubordination.

The action of the Amalgamated Woodworkers was taken in direct violation of an agreement signed by them, and which provided: "That in case of any difference between the National Cash Register Company and the members of the Amalgamated Wood Workers, no strike shall be declared until the general officers of the Amalgamated Union have investigated and endeavored to adjust the question in dispute."

Mr. and Mrs. Gale have been divorced at San Francisco. Evidently their married career was a breezy one.

COOK GIVEN TO FIRES.

SALINAS, June 20.—John Harp, a cook by occupation, was caught this afternoon by Marshal Nesbitt in the act of setting fire to his residence on Pajaro street. Six alarms in the past twenty-four hours had put the officers on the alert, and their watch was rewarded by the capture of Harp, who had attempted to burn the residence of Hon. G. A. Daugherty twice, his own place three times, and the United Presbyterian Church once. Harp would make no statement when arrested.

James Fahey Sustains a Fatal Stroke of Apoplexy in a Closet in the City Jail.

James Fahey died very suddenly in the City Jail at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning from a stroke of apoplexy. He was serving a short sentence for intoxication, and had been working on the chain gang. Saturday he sustained a stroke of apoplexy and was carried to the jail and placed in the County Receiving Hospital. He was able to walk Tuesday, and that night he did complain of being ill. Early yesterday morning he went to the closet and a few minutes later another prisoner found Fahey lying on the stone floor. When the jailer reached him he was dead. He had probably dropped to the floor soon after arising and died almost instantly. The body was removed to Booth & Boyle's undertaking establishment. It is not known whether the deceased had any relatives in this part of the country.

Assault and Threats of Mob Violence in the "Wide-open" Little Town—Temperance Instrument and Means not Exactly Liked.

CORONA, Junet 20.—[From The Resident Correspondent.] Late day afternoon the Marshal a warrant on Druggist R. F. gs, to appear before Justice Phil- the 25th inst., on a charge of vio- the liquor ordinance, and a like rrant will be served on Druggist R. Hamilton, who is out of town. he city will prosecute through the ity Attorney, G. R. Freeman, assisted the Anti-Saloon League's counsel, win W. Hahn, of Pasadena.

It seems that the local Anti-Saloon League, backed by the State League, employed Lewis Austin, alias Fred Lewis, to come here and do detective work. It is stated on good authority that Austin enticed minors to drink some of the liquor which he had procured as incriminating evidence. There are liable to be unexpected developments regarding some parties connected with the case.

Owing to an unaccountable oversight on the part of the law-framers and the law-makers of this city, prohibitory ordinance No. 11 was repealed May 11, and the still more prohibitory ordinance No. 48, does not take effect until September 1. Consequently, in the interim Corona holds the unique position of a "wide-open town." Notwithstanding this fact, the entity or nonentity of the law will be brought to issue.

Last evening in Frank Geith's store, following an altercation in which Ernest Brown accused the Anti-Saloon League in general and Ben Austin in particular, of unfair methods of investigating the liquor question, E. B. Gearhart, a by-stander, took Austin's part and severely kicked Coburn. He was promptly arrested and fined $10.

The crowd collected by this disturbance had scarcely dispersed when groups of men and boys were seen gathering in dark places on the streets, their heads close together holding whispered conversations. There were threatening mutterings of tar and feathers for Lewis Austin and a colleague, Steve Stephenson. Later, when it was known that both parties were armed, it was feared some dire tragedy would be enacted before morning, but better counsel prevailed, and there was no further disturbance. The Marshal and others patrolled through the night with Lewis Austin and Stephenson, the former under arrest.

The conservative temperance people, although in strong sympathy with the cause, disapprove of the instrument and means employed. The better element in town all unite in condemning the mob demonstration.

WELCOME TO PASTOR.

Members of the First Presbyterian Church Give a Reception in Honor of Rev. Apuilla Webb.

The members of the First Presbyterian Church, and Presbyterians generally, last night united in a reception to Rev. Aquilla Webb, the recently-installed pastor of the First Church. The reception was held in the handsome parlors of the church, which were decorated with a great profusion of roses and English ivy, presenting a most attractive and inviting appearance. As the guests arrived they were presented to the pastor and his wife, who occupied a place near the center of the room, supported by some ladies and gentlemen of the congregation, and then they were refreshed with fruitade and wafers. An hour was spent pleasantly in social chat and congratulation, when the following programme was taken up:

The first number was a delightful contraito solo by Miss Sybil Conklin, who responded to an urgent encore. Addresses of welcome were made by Rev. W. S. Young, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church; W. S. Taylor and Guernsey Brown. A poem was read by Mrs. R. D. List, and the welcome, on behalf of other churches of the city, was voiced by Rev. Dr. J. J. Wilkin, rector of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presence of Rev. J. W. Ellis, a former pastor of the First Church, who joined heartily in the congratulations being extended to his successor. The response of Mr. Webb was timely and pleasant, and was received with applause.

Across the front of the reception-room, near the ceiling, the word "welcome" in large letters, wrought out in red, white and blue electric lights, seemed to speak no louder a welcome than Mr. Webb received from his people last night.

OUR System of Removable Bridge Teeth

entirely with the large suction plate. Any number of teeth can be put in without extracting any good teeth you may have, and no plate in the roof of the mouth. They are firmer than a plate and cannot be laughed, coughed or sneezed out. The teeth are anchored in the mouth, yet are removable and take up very little room—only a narrow ridge around the edge of the gums.
This method is especially adapted where all the lower teeth are out, and it is well known that the dentist profession have nothing successful to offer in this place; and, furthermore, partial lower plates have not been, and cannot be, successfully made by any known method. The bridge is comfortable, and the wearer soon becomes unconscious of its presence. INVESTIGATE THIS BEFORE HAVING ANY TEETH EXTRACTED OR BEFORE GETTING BRIDGE WORK OR A PLATE.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE—IN THE OFFICES AND COURTS

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Board of Public Works will today consider bids for the street-sweeping contract during the coming year, and because the lowest bid entails an additional expense to the city above that paid during the year just ending, there is a difficult problem to solve.

Retail liquor dealers will make a protest to the City Council Monday against the adoption of the proposed new liquor ordinance, and some opposition to the measure will come from Councilmen.

Clarence Galbreth, son of an attorney of this city, was on trial yesterday on the charge of stealing a bicycle last March. He was acquitted.

Judge Day appointed a guardian yesterday for little Viola Murphy, in the person of Mrs. F. H. Randall of this city.

Three little vagabonds were brought up in the Police Court yesterday charged with vagrancy. They will be sentenced today.

Ah Bing, alleged highbinder, was sentenced to pay a fine of $30 for carrying concealed weapons.

AT THE CITY HALL

SWEEPING CONTRACT PROVES TROUBLESOME.

CITY MAY HAVE TO PAY HEAVILY FOR THE WORK.

Proposed New Liquor-license Ordinance Appears to Have a Loophole and Will Meet With Opposition in the Council Monday.

The Board of Public Works, at its meeting today, will have a hard nut to crack. It is the street-sweeping contract and its awarding. By the terms of the lowest bidders, the city will be compelled to pay for its street sweeping during the coming year from $5000 to $7000 more than was expended for a similar purpose during the year just ending.

Under the contract now in force, Franklin & Alexander are doing machine sweeping for 14½ cents per thousand square yards. Of three bidders to make offers to the City Council last Monday this firm is the lowest. They now want 24¾ cents per thousand square yards for machine sweeping.

By the terms of the contract, which is to be let for the coming year, the hand-sweeping in the first district, instead of being done by the city directly, will be let out to the successful bidder. Franklin & Alexander want 62 cents per thousand square yards for the hand sweeping. As the district to be swept by hand extends from Main to Hill streets, and from Marchessault to Sixth street, the expense at the figure named will be greater than the price now paid by the city. At present eighteen men are employed at a salary of $2 per day to sweep the business streets by hand.

When the bids were opened by the Council, all three were referred to the Board of Public Works, and they will be taken up today. Franklin & Alexander assert that they have been losing money on the contract during the last year, and will state their case to the board at its session. If the contractors can convince the committee that they have been losing money, their bid, being the lowest, may be accepted.

The plan of the Council to take the hand-sweeping out of the control of the city and give it into the control of contractors, is criticised by many city officials and other citizens. It is claimed that since the business streets have been cleaned during the day by the "white angels" the work has been done in a much more satisfactory manner than ever before.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

NEW ORDINANCE OPPOSED.

Opposition of no mild character will be brought to bear on the proposed new liquor ordinance when it comes before the City Council Monday on recommendation from the Board of Police Commissioners. Some of this opposition will come from retail liquor dealers and some from members of the Council.

Although, in recommending the ordinance, it was understood that the Police Commission thought to secure a better law for the government of restaurants in which liquor is dispensed, there seems to have been an oversight. By the terms of the proposed new law restaurants will be permitted to dispense beer and wine by the glass, instead of in the original package, as now. Further the ordinance makes no provision which will prevent the restaurants selling malt and vinous liquors at all hours of the day and night.

In view of the fact that the restaurant liquor license can be secured for $18 per month, while a retail liquor license costs $50 per month, this is a manifest injustice, the saloon men think, to their interests. Certain hours of opening and closing and Sunday closing are prescribed for the saloons, while no such restrictions are placed on the restaurants.

This ordinance was drawn by Councilman Bowen, and yesterday he and President Powers of the Council held a long conference in regard to the matter. When it comes before the Council Monday, Mr. Powers will move an amendment to the effect that the restaurants be allowed to dispose of malt and vinous liquors with meals only at certain hours; that is, between 6 and 8 o'clock a.m., from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and from 5 to 8 p.m. In this way the privilege will be extended to the holders of restaurant liquor licenses only during meal hours.

On account of the difficulty which has been encountered in defining a bona fide meal, it is believed that, although the proposed new ordinance does define such a repast as a "hot meal," restaurant men, if so inclined, will find a loophole whereby the intent of the ordinance can be violated with immunity.

With the exception of the privilege of selling spirituous liquors, the new ordinance practically gives to restaurant men all the rights which the retail liquor dealers enjoy, and the saloon men will make a vigorous protest against such an arrangement.

New Library Books.

Attendants at the Public Library are busily engaged in listing and cataloguing 500 new books, and expect to have them ready for the shelves within two weeks. Many of them will be in place sooner than that time. Among the new books there are a large number of recent novels by popular authors, as well as many scientific books.

Oil in the Street.

The Superintendent of Streets was yesterday notified that a pool of oil and water in a Sixth-street gutter just east of Vermont avenue is overflowing into the street. The informant stated that on account of the sewer inlet being clogged, there is no place for the water and oil to escape, except over the street. The complaint will be investigated today.

Want Alley Opened.

Yesterday there was filed a petition to the City Council asking for the opening of an alley between Main and Los Angeles streets and between Second and Third streets. The petition is signed by I. N. Van Nuys, H. Newmark, George Montgomery and others. It will come before the Council Monday.

AT THE COURT HOUSE

YOUNG GALBRETH WINS AN ACQUITTAL.

JURY FINDS HIM NOT GUILTY OF STEALING A BICYCLE.

Former High School Pupil Defendant in a Grand Larceny Case—The Story of Galbreth's Co-defendant—Head Work vs. Hand Work.

Clarence Galbreth, the 15-year-old son of E. E. Galbreth, Esq., a prominent local attorney, was on trial in the criminal court yesterday, charged with grand larceny. It is alleged that on March 23 young Galbreth and a youthful accomplice named Fred Sevy stole a bicycle belonging to Ralph W. Dale. The wheel, an Orient, was standing in front of the Frost building, at the corner of Second and Broadway, one Saturday afternoon, when suddenly it disappeared. It was subsequently found in a Main-street pawn shop, accompanied by a writing, purporting to be a bill of sale, signed by Ralph Hamlin, a bicycle dealer, doing business near Washington and Main streets. The instrument tried to show that one Jack Allen had paid Hamlin $50 for the bicycle.

Several days after the alleged transaction Galbreth and Sevy were arrested and charged with the theft of the wheel. The alleged offense was committed after the new law went into effect making wheel-stealing a penitentiary offense. Sevy, half of whose blood appears to be Chinese, declined to stand trial, and being under 18 years of age, was sent to the Whittier Reform School. But Galbreth pleaded not guilty. He has been a well-known High School pupil, and yesterday a number of his former schoolmates were in the courtroom watching the trial. They called him "Cupid" at school; or else "Brick." His hair is of that which the old Greeks so much admired and called tawny.

So many wheels have been stolen of late that especial interest was taken in the present prosecution by the Bicycle Insurance Company.

One of the principal witnesses for the State yesterday was Sevy, the self-confessed culprit, who mounted the stand in his gray Whittier uniform and related the part which he said each of the boys acted in the alleged larceny. From his story it might appear that Galbreth did the head work, while Sevy did the dirty work of actual theft.

"That afternoon," said Sevy, "we decided to steal an Orient bike and went to the postoffice to draw up a bill of sale. Galbreth did the writing. That was about 2 o'clock. A couple of hours later we spotted an Orient by the Frost building. We had a conversation about which of us should take it. He wouldn't take it, for he was afraid, and at last I took it and rode down to Joe and Billy's pawn shop. Galbreth told me I had better take it, because I was going away soon and it wouldn't matter much. When I got down to the pawn shop Galbreth had not yet arrived, so I rode down to Muck Chuck's drug store on Los Angeles street. Muck is a Chinese druggist. After awhile Galbreth arrived at the store and together we took the wheel to the pawn shop and I pawned it for $5. Galbreth stayed outside. Then we went to a cigar stand and divided the money; Galbreth took $4.75 and I had two bits."

There was an audible snicker over the courtroom when Sevy told of the division of the pawn money.

A. M. Davis, city agent of the Bicycle Insurance Company, testified to locating the stolen bicycle and hunting up the pawners. Some alleged confessions of Galbreth before Chief Elton were ruled out by Judge Smith yesterday, in accordance with a ruling of the Supreme Court in the recent Williams case. It appeared that the Chief had told the boys that they had better tell the truth about the matter, in an interview prior to their preliminary examination, and this was held to be in the nature of duress.

The defense presented no testimony yesterday, choosing to submit its case on the evidence of the prosecution. It was claimed that young Galbreth's connection with the writing of the alleged bill of sale was under a misapprehension created by Sevy and that it was Sevy all along who actually stole and sold the bicycle. Since his arrest in March Galbreth has been out on bail. During Fiesta week he was arrested and fined for rubbing burnt cork on women's faces in the street after dark. One time Galbreth won $46 in a Chinese lottery on money furnished by Sevy; Sevy's share in the winnings was 50 cents. Galbreth is also said to enjoy the great American game of poker, to say nothing of billiards and pin pool. His attorneys yesterday were his father and Jud R. Rush, Esq., while the prosecution was in the hands of Deputy District Attorney McComas.

The jury retired at 4:20 p.m., and at 10 o'clock returned a verdict of not guilty. At 9 o'clock the balloting showed ten to 2 for acquittal, and a disagreement was anticipated.

As the jurors filed out of the courtroom, one man shook hands with the acquitted defendant and said, with a knowing wink in his eye, "You had better behave yourself now, my boy."

Galbreth says he has learned a lesson, and realizes that there is nothing in the life he was leading.

PERPLEXED EXECUTORS.

WHOSE MONEY HAVE THEY?

Willard H. Stimson, Ezra T. Stimson and Charles D. Stimson, as executors of the estate of the late Thomas D. Stimson, began suit yesterday against a score of defendants to compel them to interplead their claims to $1968 owed by the Stimson estate to John M. Gardiner, a contractor.

On September 28, 1900, the executors entered into a written contract with Gardiner, whereby he agreed to furnish material and do the labor required to put in a heating plant in the basements of the Stimson Block and the Douglas building, and in a tunnel under Spring street, connecting the buildings for the above-named money. The work was completed only a few days ago. In doing the work Gardiner procured material and services from many sources, and all these firms claim that Gardiner is now indebted to them on that account. They are defendants in the suit begun yesterday, but plaintiffs allege that they are unable to state whether the demands are all just, for the claims of the parties greatly exceed the sum of $1968, the contract price. That is why the court is asked to unravel the tangle. John D. Pope, Esq., is counsel for the perplexed executors.

INCORPORATIONS.

RAILROAD AND WATER.

The Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Redondo Railroad Company, with principal place of business in Los Angeles, incorporated yesterday with a capital stock of $200,000, divided into $100 shares, of which amount $15,000 has been subscribed. The railroad intended to be constructed is a single or double-track railway, to be operated either by steam or electricity from some convenient point in Santa Monica, by a direct route to Redondo, at an estimated length of fifteen miles. The directors are Abbot Kinney, 146 shares; W. L. Graves, C. H. Stone, H. M. Wright and C. A. Sumner, all of Los Angeles.

The Tijera Creek Water Company, with principal place of business in Los Angeles, incorporated yesterday with a capital stock of $7810, divided into $22 shares, of which amount $6138 has been subscribed. The directors are A. J. W. Keating, Bonita Meadows; José Machado, Bernardino Machado, Bellona Rancho; W. L. Alexander, Ballona Rancho; Exupere Sentous, Los Angeles.

VIOLA'S NEW HOME.

GIVEN TO A GUARDIAN.

It took four days to dispose of the custody of little Viola Murphy, whose parents have been waging such a bitter fight before Judge Day in habeas corpus proceedings that terminated yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Guidin, the mother, and William H. Murphy, the father, were both adjudged to be unfit custodians of their little daughter, and after long consideration it seemed best to appoint a guardian in the person of Mrs. F. H. Randall of No. 834 West Tenth street, a woman of family and means, who was required to furnish a $1000 bond.

Other applications for the appointment of guardian were made by Max Koch, O. J. Brown and John G. Orth, to say nothing of the petitions filed by both parents.

When little Viola, now 10 years old, becomes 14 years of age, she may chose her own guardian.

THE INFERIOR COURTS

THREE LITTLE BOYS A-TRAMPING WENT.

TODAY THEY WILL BE SENTENCED FOR VAGRANCY.

Bing, Alleged Highbinder, Sentenced for Carrying Revolver—Shirt-waist Man's Troubles—Little Burgess Marshals His Witnesses.

Three little vagabonds, who left their homes to become tramps, were brought up in the Police Court yesterday.

They struck the town yesterday morning, and went from house to house in East Los Angeles begging for their breakfasts. A policeman found them lying stretched out under a tree and sent the whole bunch in.

They gave the names of Joe Ross, Frank Brown and Arthur Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald is a little bit of a fellow with a snub nose and appealing blue eyes. He ran away from home in San Francisco about a month ago. He says he came south to get a job as an orange picker. Ross is a Missouri boy who left his home four years ago and went to St. Louis. He has been tramping five weeks. Brown is an orphan, and wandered away from Portland two months ago out on the road.

They will be sentenced today.

Boy Marshals Witnesses.

Fred Burgess, a boy who accuses Henry Cosuha, a stableman, of breaking his arm, had the light infantry out in his behalf yesterday when the battery case against Cosuha came to trial before Justice Austin.

A string of little boys who had seen Burgess's arm broken on the way home from the Eighth-street school were triumphantly marshaled by young Burgess.

Half an hour before the trial was set he came marching down First street at the head of the pack like a Tartar avenger.

"Come on, you kids," he directed, and turned them up the stairs to the Police Court.

After giving his own testimony the boy settled himself sternly to superintending the business. Each boy as he came from the witness stand was given the seat of honor at his right, and was patronizingly patted on the back if he had done well, or indignantly roasted if his story did not come up to the ideas of Burgess.

Burgess was one of a few boys who were trying to ride bicycles over a lot of loose hay that Cosuha and another man were trying to put on a wagon.

The defendant put out his pitchfork and stuck the handle between the spokes of Burgess's wheel. The boy fell on the street-car track and broke his wrist.

The trial will be continued today.

Hall Fined.

Leonard L. Hall, the surveyor who hit an expressman named Edwards because he thought his wife had been insulted, was fined $5 in the Police Court for battery, which he paid.

SEVEN MEMBERS OF THE GRADUATING CLASS OF THE COUNTY HOSPITAL SCHOOL.

SURROUNDED by huge banks of cut flowers and the glad faces of admiring friends, eight sweet-faced young women in blue and white last night embarked on their lifework of mercy.

It was the fifth annual commencement of the Training School for Nurses of the Los Angeles County Hospital, and the conferring of diplomas came as the crowning event of two years' arduous service at the bedsides of the unfortunates who come to that institution. The amphitheater of the Medical College was well filled, and the affair was altogether auspicious.

Rev. J. R. Compton opened the exercises with prayer, and the programme was interspersed with orchestral music.

DR. COLE'S "DON'TS."

"I was always deeply impressed," began Dr. George L. Cole, in his address to the class, "with that motto, 'Life must be measured by deeds, not years.' If this be true the life of a nurse must indeed be a long one. Your opportunities for good are immense, in the close relationship you have with the unfortunates that come under your care." Dr. Cole went on to give the girls a few don'ts, saying: "Don't be unsharitable; don't try to change your patient's religion; don't be chagrined at being dismissed; don't disregard your own health; don't have a favorite physician; don't be a pessimist; don't be too talkative, and above all, don't betray a confidence."

FIELD ELOQUENT.

E. S. Field, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, proved himself both an orator and humorist. Following his funny stories, he said:

"I congratulate you, young women, on the arrival of the long-awaited moment, when your arduous labors are to be rewarded. Every young man and woman should have a profession, and you have chosen a noble one. Some of the noblest women who ever lived have adorned and a grateful world has paid and is paying them homage. Hospitals are the product of our Christian civilization, and woman the natural nurse."

Mr. Field paid an eloquent and feeling tribute to Mrs. Carrie B. Hovey, who died last January of pneumonia over a year and a half.

"There is a feature of sadness about this meeting tonight," he said. "There is one diploma here that will not be called for. After consecrating the bloom of her young womanhood to this noble ambiton, one of your number whom you had learned to love has been taken. Absent in body, she may be present in spirit."

DR. KURTZ TALKS.

Dr. J. Kurtz gave a short address tracing the history of the school for nurses in Los Angeles.

"Since the establishment of thi sschool about ten years ago," he said, "there has been an immense increase in the number of nurses, but this has not been bad for the public or the young women. All of them are busy.

"Nursing is not only a most delicate but a most dangerous vocation. The many virtues required are little understood. The trained nurse must meet a foe deadlier than bullets—germs."

DIPLOMAS CONFERRED.

Miss U. M. Carter, superintendent of nurses, then conferred the diplomas, thanking each recipient for her two years' faithful service, and wishing her success. Following came the presentation of flowers by the graduates' successors, the members of the outgoing class being literally loaded down with beautiful bouquets.

The class started two years ago with thirteen probationers, eight continuing to the end. One was called by death, one stopped because of ill-health, and three retired from the class to be married.

MINES AND MINING ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

A MILL IN THE MINE BEING SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED.

Glowing Reports from the Coming Mining Country—Sale of the Sterling Mines in Sonora, Mexico—Parr's Group Bonded to Los Angeles Parties.

A few months ago the San Francisco Chronicle published an editorial in which the statement was made that it was probably only a matter of time before the stamp mill would be erected over underground workings of a mine instead of, as now, upon the surface of the ground. The idea was suggested by the necessity of providing for an economical method for the treatment of the ores in the lower levels of a mine instead of being obliged to hoist the ore at great expense to the surface of the earth. The suggestion has been favorably received by mine owners in South Africa, where the expense consequent upon the hoisting of ore from great depths has become a serious problem. In respect to this the Chronicle in a late issue says:

"The Rand engineers have planned a system of dividing the incline, which is proposed to be driven to the 15,000-foot level into sections, with complete hoisting and pumping plants at the different stations cut in the vein, to do the milling, pumping and hoisting on the spot. They have carefully figured all the expenses, and confidently declare that under these conditions the cost of the mining and reduction of ore extracted from the 15,000-level may be accomplished for $3 per ton more cheaply than it is now done by lifting from the 3000-foot level. Of course, it is to be presumed that the drainage of the mine will be required to do service in the future, and possibly in the final lift of the ore to the surface. The pulp or waste of the mill may be incorporated in solution, or, at all events, so much of it as may not have been precipitated or otherwise disposed of in the workings."

COMING MINING COUNTRY.

Thomas Ewing, president of the Forest Miners' Association, returned to Los Angeles a few days ago from a trip through some of the mining camps and towns in the central and southern portions of Arizona. Col. Ewing describes that Territory, to quote his own words, "the coming mining country." He says that the people there are employing modern mining methods for the development of their properties; that they have cut loose from old ways, with the result that they are showing up some of the richest mineral bodies ever found. As a consequence, Arizona is forging ahead; capitalists are busily seeking investments, and the Territory, he says, has fairly entered upon a period of mining history that must surely place it first in the great mineral-producing States and Territories of this country.

MINES IN MEXICO.

The Los Angeles (Ariz.) correspondent of the Los Angeles Mining Review reports that one of the Sterling group of mines, in the State of Sonora, about 100 miles south of Nogales. The purchasers are chiefly residents of Dunsmuir. There are fifteen pertenencias in the group, and the ore carries both gold and silver, some of it, as stated above, assaying as high as $600 per ton, with 30 ounces of silver per ton. Shipments will be made to develop the property on an extensive scale, Mr. Burnham, of Providence, R. I., in charge of the work.

Ore from Montezuma, Sonora, where the strike of some rich ore was made in the Don Genaro and Don Genaro mines, owned and operated by the Mexican Development Company of Kansas City, Mo. One report states that some of the ore from the former mine ran, under assay, as high as 1000 ounces of copper and 33 ounces silver. Ore coming from the Annex is reported to run 28 per cent. copper, 32 ounces silver and $10 in gold.

NEW MEXICO.

The Silver City Enterprise prints a report that the San Francisco Smelting Company intends establishing a smelting plant in Grant county. It is said that the company will start with a capacity of fifty tons daily capacity, to be increased as business requires. The location of the smelter has not been decided, but it is thought that it will be at Deming.

Ore from the Santa Rita district is going to the Clifton Copper Company smelter. A strike in its Wildcat mine, on the 400-foot level, south, where it encountered a fissure vein, showing a heavy body of sulphide ores of satisfactory character and values. The 100-ton concentrating plant is now under construction, and will be completed by August 1. It is the intention of the company to sink a double-compartment shaft through which the ore for mill purposes will be hoisted and delivered directly into bins at the mill by gravity. The Silver City Reduction Works has a contract of 200 tons' capacity is to be put in. The three furnaces in operation treat eighty tons of ore daily.

VIRGINIA DALE.

The Virginia Dale group of claims in the Virginia Dale district, San Bernardino county, this State, has been bonded to Los Angeles parties, among whom are Woollacott, Kaspare Cohn and J. A. Off. The same parties and others, it is said, took hold about one year ago of the Big Butte mine in the Virginia Dale district, and under efficient management ran an unprofitable property into a good-paying mine. It is well known that the ore bodies in the Virginia Dale district are rich in gold, but the scarcity of water has always been a drawback that nothing could be done to overcome, as the Big Butte Company has just put in a plant that is now furnishing plenty of water for some of the mines. But the supply is much too limited. That, however, will not deter men with capital from going into the Dale district, believing, as just as well known that there is gold there, and that all that is needed is some capital to develop it. Several Los Angeles capitalists are interesting themselves in that district in the expectation that it will not be long before it is supplied with sufficient water to permit the rich ore bodies of the Virginia Dale to be developed and worked in a systematic and unlimited manner.

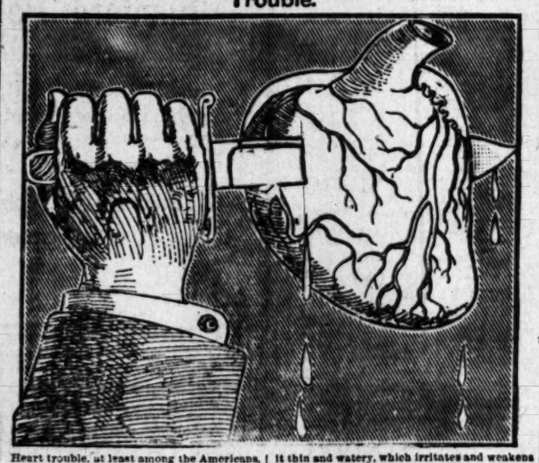
ARIZONA MINES.

Advices just received from Willcox, Cochise county, announce a strike of another rich character of ore in the Dos Cabezas district. W. A. Off, of the State Bank and Trust Company, Los Angeles, who is a director of the company, when asked if the report was true, replied in the affirmative, and that as the secretary of the company would soon return from the East further particulars about it could be given.

Ore shipments received last week at the Globe smelter from the Old Dominion Copper Company, whose property is in the Warren district, Cochise county, were as follows: Copper Queen, 1,200 tons; Detroit, 1,000 tons; Arizona Commercial, 1,000 tons; Shannon, 1,000 tons; Arizona Copper Company, 1,000 tons; Longfellow, 1,000 tons; Calumet & Arizona, 1,000 tons; Moctezuma, 1,000 tons; Stanley, 1,000 tons; Copper Queen, 1,000 tons; Detroit, 1,000 tons; Arizona Commercial, 1,000 tons; Shannon, 1,000 tons; Arizona Copper Company, 1,000 tons; Longfellow, 1,000 tons; Calumet & Arizona, 1,000 tons; Moctezuma, 1,000 tons; Stanley, 1,000 tons.

Heart Disease

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble.



Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves. The Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, making it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores, and which contains valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach terrible except cancer of the stomach.

Full sized package of these tablets sold by druggists at 50 cents. Little book on stomach troubles mailed free. Address tween the wall and ore chimney the rock changed from lime to quartz and calcite, the latter being a vein about six inches in width, following the foot wall. The ore carries good gold values.

The Globe Silver Belt states that the hoist and fifty-horse-power boiler for the Arizona Commercial Company have arrived, and been hauled out to the Copper Hill mine. The hoist, which has a capacity for sinking 1000 feet, will be in place at the Copper Hill shaft in about ten days, when sinking from the 300-foot level will be begun.

The Jerome Reporter states that three contracts have been let by the Verde King people. One was running the third 100 feet in the Walnut Creek claim, on the north side of the creek; another was for running the third 100 feet in the Butte claim, on the north side of the creek, and the third was for sinking forty feet more in the shaft, on the Butte. Good ore is being taken from the bottom of the shaft, and the company expects to find better ore as the shaft is sunk deeper.

COPPER EXPORTS.

The exports of copper from the United States during last month (May) were 10,910 long tons. These figures show a remarkable change as compared with the preceding three months, exceeding even the figures for last January. The figures are as follows: January, 10,003 tons; February, 8453; March, 6818; April, 4849 tons. Reliable opinion is that the demand for copper from Europe will continue to be large and steady for some time to come.

BLACK SAND.

Mines and Minerals of Scranton, Pa., has in its June number an article by R. Lind Watson on black sand, that is of interest beyond the particular locality to which the author of it refers. He says: "For years, it has been known that deposits of auriferous black sand occur at intervals along the northern and western coasts of Vancouver Island, but until last summer the difficulties in the way of saving the gold were believed to be insuperable. The fallacy of this belief was demonstrated at Wreck Bay in the summer of 1900, when about $12,000 was taken from the black sand claims. Wreck Bay is situated north of Barclay Sound and about five miles from Amphitrite Point. It extends three miles along the coast and one mile inland, and may be reached by a trail from Ucluelet Arm, the distance being two and a half miles. The beach is exposed at low tide and consists of black sand mixed with ordinary sand and gravel. A flume two miles long conducts water to the beach for washing the sand. An ordinary sluice box is used for saving the gold; and in the bottom of the sluice box, silver-plated copper plates mercurialized are laid, the plates being of the same width as the sluice box. A heavy wire grizzly is placed at the charging end of the sluice box to keep back the gravel and allow the passage only of the sand with its precious contents. One of the difficulties met with in saving the gold is that much of the sand is garnetiferous, and the specific gravity of the garnet is so heavy that scaly gold is unable to work its way by gravity through the sand, and so passes out of the box and is lost."

MINING NOTES.

The annual meeting of the members of the Southwest Miners' Association will be held in the rooms of the association in the German-American Bank Building, First and Main streets, on July 9. The directors of the association express the hope that every member who can attend, will do so.

The Yreka (Cal.) Journal states that a company is now making arrangements to place a dredger in McAdams Creek, to clean up the bedrock gravel of that stream, so difficult to handle by any other process on account of the great quantity of water in the ground.

The copper exports of Mexico during 1900 had a value of more than $5,000,000 in gold. According to government statistics the number of mines of all kinds under development amounts to over 10,000. The new ones opened during 1900 were 2184 in number. Considerable English and German capital is now being invested in the mines of the republic.

Cripple Creek's gold production for last month is stated at $1,120,000. This is a decrease on previous months, due to the temporary shutting down of the Portland mine.

A mass of gold and quartz was recently found while placering in Spanish gulch, Northeastern Oregon, that weighed twenty-five pounds. Experts are said to have valued the gold in it at $1800.

Leadville district, Colorado, produced last month (May) 80,000 tons of ore yielding $1,300,000.

BEACH TROLLEY LINE.

C. A. Sumner Speaks of Prospects of Railroad to Connect Some of Seaside Towns.

The filing of papers of incorporation of the Santa Monica Ocean Park and Redondo Railway Company yesterday was the subject of a good deal of attention as there had of late been persistent rumors of a new transportation line between those towns.

"I can't say much of the matter now, for it is in embryo," said C. A. Sumner, one of the directors, last evening. "It is almost certain that the road will be builded within a year. The outlook for earnings from a transportation line connecting Santa Monica, Ocean Park, Redondo and the towns intervening is very bright."

"Is your company connected with the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Company?"

"No," said Mr. Sumner.

"How about connection with Los Angeles?"

"That is a matter for future consideration."

THE OIL FIELDS

IMPORTANT DEALS IN OIL PROPERTY.

Oceanic Bought Out by Eastern Consolidated, Which is to "Make Good"—Hummer at Whittier.

AN EVENTFUL chapter in the affairs of the Eastern Consolidated Oil Company closed last evening when officers of that corporation turned their faces northward, ending the investigation of lands controlled by the company in this and adjoining fields.

Ten days ago there arrived in this city from New York ex-Lieut.-Gov. Earnest Cady of Hartford, Ct.; Miles B. Preston, ex-Mayor of Hartford, and Charles J. Noyes of Boston, directors of the Eastern Consolidated. They were accompanied by J. S. McGiehan, Esq., and the object of the visit was to inspect the property of the corporation.

Through the eastern press their advertising agents had made exaggerated claims for the company, and to each and every one The Times took exception, showing up in true light the real condition of affairs here. Such exposures resulted in an investigation on the part of the directors, who had no personal knowledge of their California oil lands, but depended on that obtained from their agents.

In a personal inspection, which began ten days ago, the company's holdings were weighed and found wanting. And since their arrival here it has been the object of its representatives to put the company on a basis to make good all its promises.

J. S. McGiehan, who is a prominent attorney of New York City, took charge at once, and last night made known the result of his work here.

Besides completing the purchase of 20,000 acres in Gaviota and arranging for the acquirement of over 125 acres in the southwestern extension of the local field, the company has added other territory, some of which is now producing oil.

It was announced last evening that they had acquired the holdings of the Oceanic Oil Company, which consist of eleven producing wells and considerable valuable local oil territory. The deal includes three acres in the Knob Hill tract, on which there are now three producing wells; nine and a half acres in the Sisters' Hospital grounds, with five producing wells; twelve acres in the Hewes tract, on which are now three producers; one well near First street, and two undeveloped lots near the intersection of Havart and Court streets.

All the property acquired is in the local oil belt, and it is reported the monthly production is close to 2500 barrels. When the local product brought close to 1 a barrel, the Oceanic company paid 1 per cent. a share on a capitalization of $150,000.

It is the company's intention to begin the further developing of the land at once, and at least six wells will be put in within the next thirty days.

Besides the above local holdings it has acquired a tract of eighty acres in the Fullerton field. The property is in line with important developments, and is regarded as choice holdings. The consideration is not made public in either case.

There has also been a change in the local management of the company. H. D. Lombard, who acted as the company's representative, has been relieved, and C. A. Sumner will in the future take charge of affairs here.

"It is our intention," said Mr. McGiehan this evening, "to expend $100,000 in developing oil on our various properties. A stand- will be sent out to Gaviota at once, and if oil is found there sufficient to warrant it, we will construct wharfs and have our own tank steamers. It has been our object to put the company on a solid basis and I believe that we have succeeded. When the company's land is fully developed as it is intended it shall be, our production should meet all demands.

The party left last night for Bakersfield to inspect the company's holdings in the Kern River field, and will then proceed East.

WONDERFUL GUSHER FOUND AT WHITTIER.

MURPHY'S WELL AMONG THE BEST IN CALIFORNIA.

Putting Out Four Hundred Barrels of High-gravity Fluid from a Hole Over Two Thousand Feet Deep—Strong Pressure of Gas.

The record oil strike in the Whittier field has just been made on the property of the Murphy Oil Company. It has been known for a number of days that the company's No. 2 well, which was completed recently, was an unusually good well, but owing to the reticence of the company's officials regarding its affairs and the refusal of the employés to give out a particle of information concerning operations, it has been impossible for the public to secure any reliable data.

The Times' Whittier correspondent however, has it from an unquestionable source that the well has been flowing for two weeks. Not only is the oil coming through the tubing without the aid of a pump, but it is also flowing through 700 feet of 3-inch pipe into a receiving tank located 400 feet higher than the top of the casing. The well started off at 400 barrels a day, and there has since been no material decrease in the quantity produced. The principal reason why it has been impossible for outsiders to gain any idea of what the well is doing is the fact that the pipe from the head of the casing enters the receiving tank at the bottom instead of being run up over the top, as is the usual custom in this field. While people who have visited the well could obtain but little satisfaction from what they were able to see, their ears certainly told them that the conditions were unusual, for the roaring of the oil as it was forced into the tank, could be heard for nearly a quarter of a mile. The petroleum, too, is of a refining quality, several different tests registering between 23 and 25 gravity.

The well is 2020 feet deep. It was put down over 1900 feet with two strings of casing, 9⅝ and 7⅝. At this depth a stratum of light oil was encountered, but the earth pressure was too heavy for the light casing, and operations were suspended while a carload of extra heavy 5⅝ casing was ordered from the East. With the arrival of the stronger pipe drilling was resumed, and the hole carried down to its present depth. It was the intention of the company to go still deeper, for the hole was in excellent shape, but the pressure exerted by the oil and gas was so great that further progress was impossible. A large amount of gas comes from the well, so much that it is impossible for a person to stand looking over into the tank for any length of time.

The Murphy company developed the heavy oil at the usual depth, but not in satisfactory quantities. In spite of difficulties encountered, it has had the courage to carry this well down hundreds of feet, while nothing more encouraging (?) than water was being developed. Its tenacity has been rewarded with a well which, when the quality of oil, the depth and the probable long life as evidenced by other developments in the Puente hills, are taken into consideration, has not a superior, if an equal, in the State.

Well No. 3 is down nearly 1700 feet and operations on it are temporarily suspended, while waiting for an ordered wire cable. While the conditions on this well are not so favorable as on No. 2, every effort will be made to carry it down to the level of the flowing well. A wire rope has been used for some weeks on No. 1, and has demonstrated its superiority over hemp in making headway in instances where there is a large quantity of fluid in the hole. The company's three-inch pipe line from its wells to the Evergreen station on the Southern Pacific is nearly completed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Coming District Conference Promises to Be a Notable Religious Gathering in Numbers and Brilliant Speakers.

The Los Angeles District Epworth League conference, to be held in this city at Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church on July 13 to 16, promises to be an unusual event in the church life of Southern California. It is anticipated as the largest young people's rally ever held in this part of the State. Delegates to the number of about 5000 are expected to stop here on their way to the international convention in San Francisco. They will arrive on Saturday, July 13, and after the district conference a "league special" will be run to the convention city.

On Saturday evening the Chamber of Commerce will tender a reception to the visitors, and on Sunday afternoon a mass meeting will be held at the First Methodist Episcopal Church. On Monday evening a memorial tablet, commemorating the organization of the Epworth League in the Southern Methodist Church, will be set up with appropriate ceremony at the Trinity Church on Grand avenue.

The programme of the conference will give place to many of the leading Christian workers of the United States, including college professors, editors of denominational periodicals and brilliant pulpit orators. Among the speakers will be Rev. J. J. Tigert, D.D., editor of the Methodist Review; Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D.D., general secretary southern leagues and editor of the Epworth Era; Rev. W. B. Palmore, D.D., editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate; Rev. Gross Alexander, D.D., and Rev. Collins Denny, D.D., professors in Vanderbilt University; Rev. E. E. Hoss, D.D., editor of the Nashville Advocate; Rev. C. O. Jones, D.D., Dr. W. W. Pinson and Dr. J. F. Berry, editor of the Epworth Herald. Rev. George R. Stuart, who is now working with Sam Jones, will also be here. An able director will lead the chorus.

WATER COMPANY WANTS CONTINUANCE.

J. S. CHAPMAN, ESQ., representing the Los Angeles City Water Company, will today file in Department Three of the Superior Court a motion to continue the hearing of oral argument in the case of the city against the Crystal Springs Land and Water Company. This case has now been pending three years, and counsel for the city will ardently oppose any further continuance.

It was the intention of Mr. Chapman to file his motion yesterday, and he served notice of the action on Messrs. Lee and Scott, representing the city. The motion will be based on an affidavit of Secretary S. H. Mott of the water company, the principal contention of which is the desire to secure a delay in the Crystal Springs case, until other water-company litigation with the city is settled.

When it became known yesterday afternoon that such a motion is to be filed there was considerable discussion of the matter, and several city officials believe that the object of the motion is born of the fear that the case will be decided in favor of the city.

As soon as the motion is filed today counsel for the city will commence a bitter fight against it, for the reason that they believe that the water company is not acting in perfect good faith in making the motion. This belief is based on several reasons, and altogether, they involve a considerable history of the Crystal Springs litigation, as well as some incidents of the recent compromise negotiations between the company and the city.

This suit was commenced three years ago, and has been continued from time to time, at the instance of the water company. After many delays it finally reached the point when briefs were to be submitted. The city filed its brief last January. The present month the answer of the company was filed. The case was set for oral argument June 24.

When the recent compromise proceedings were commenced between the city and the water company the water people, first, last and all the time, insisted, as one of the conditions of the compromise, that the Crystal Springs litigation be continued. This, they said, is because the company's attorney, if compelled to take part in the compromise, could not have sufficient time in which to prepare for his argument in court. When the proposition of the company was made to the Council, because the legislative body of the city desired a day in which to consider, it was stipulated that a two days' delay should be allowed in the Crystal Springs litigation, thereby making up for the time spent in the compromise. If the proposition had been accepted the litigation would have been indefinitely postponed.

It was not, and now the water company wants a delay at any rate. These facts, it is claimed by counsel for the city, lead them to believe that the whole object of the compromise negotiations, so far as the company is concerned, was to secure a delay in this case.

It is further stated by city officials that this case is the chief one, the outcome of which is feared by the company. This, and the reason set forth in the affidavit of Mr. Mott, for the continuance—that the Crystal Springs case be postponed until other litigation be ended—is taken as evidence by counsel for the city that the company desires to affect a decision of the Crystal Springs case by favorable decisions [illegible] other cases.

PROUD "OLD GLORY."

Fourth of July Decorations to Consist of Grand Old Flag Only—Plans for Observance.

The Fourth of July Celebration Committee held a meeting in the office of the Mayor last evening and discussed arrangements for the observance of the day in Los Angeles. Ex-Judge W. A. Cheney will be orator of the day, and several other prominent citizens will participate in the exercises.

S. R. Thorpe was elected vice-president of the committee, and E. S. Sullivan treasurer.

Chairman W. L. Hardison appointed as an Auditing Committee the following-named members: S. R. Thorpe, A. M. Edelman and E. S. Sullivan.

The Finance Committee reported that it has on hand $1051. No solicitation for funds will be carried on among the merchants and business men, but the local commercial organizations will be asked to contribute.

Arend's Orchestra and band have been secured to furnish music. There will be a band concert in Central Park in the forenoon, music at Hazard's Pavilion in the afternoon and during the fireworks at Westlake Park in the evening.

It is the desire of the committee that all citizens of Los Angeles shall decorate their homes and places of business with American flags, and that no other decorations shall be used on that day.

OUR LOOLOOS' HARD LUCK.

Lost in the Dust by the Statesmen.

Jones Does Things to His Own Team.

Fourteen to Five the Story of Defeat—Bernstein Not "In Our Midst."

"Wouldn't that kill you, though?"

That's what the big crowd of rooters said yesterday at the ball game, when, after seeing the Looloos beat the barrier at the get-away, they found them nine city blocks back in the ruck at the finish.

The Statesmen won by the fearful score of 14 to 5, and they might have made it 140, if Jones had only stayed in the box long enough. He had to quit when the nine innings had been played, however, or there is no telling what the score would have been, if they had made a day's work of it. Seventeen hits, six passes to first, a wild pitch and a costly error are enough to lose several games, but when a pitcher crowds this aggregation into one contest, as Jones did yesterday, the fans will have to be shown different ball in order to see the locals win. He struck out four but that did not materially affect the score.

One great trouble with Mr. Jones is that he has too exalted an opinion of his ability. He thinks because he got a few offers from the East he is one of the best that ever flew up the creek. The Statesmen, however, gave him a hard jolt yesterday, and if they failed to convince him, the crowd jollied him sufficiently to put him next. However, the best of them have off days, and Jones probably had one due yesterday. He can pitch gilt-edge ball, but he fell down pretty hard.

The difficulty started off with the promise of being interesting, and it would have been so if the seventh inning could have been cut out. That was a catastrophe, for Jones not only gave two passes, but allowed five hits when the bases were half full. Most of these good-luck swats landed in places where various Looloos had been sometime before, and the ball found so many holes in the infield that when the dust the Statesmen made in chasing each other round the bases, rettled, the crowd found no its sorrow that the foreigners had scored seven times. That was enough to win the game, but as it had been won before, no one cared.

In the Looloos' first attempt, Brockhoff was passed down the line, but died an early death at second on a double play of Reitz's hit to short right. Householder then slammed out a two-bagger to the right field fence, and on Courtney's wild throw to Sheehan to head off Householder at third, Eddie ran clear round the bases. They made two more in the second on Hutchinson's gift, Reilly's hit to left and Bowman's pretty two-cushion shot to the score board, which sent in Hutch and Reilly.

The Statesmen made two in their second attempt on Stanley's hit, Sheehan's bunt and Strickett's double to left. They got three more in the third. After McGucken had reached second on a hit and a wild pitch, Hanlon and Stricklett were passed to first and Devereaux sent the three home with a hit to the scoreboard. Two more were gathered in the sixth in about the same way.

In the seventh came the blow that almost killed Father Looloo. Stanley, Devereaux, McLaughlin, Doyle and McGucken each knocked the ball around in various parts of the lot, and with Courtney and Hanlon being given a life on balls, seven runs resulted.

The Looloos had been doing nothing from the third to the finish, except chase the ball, but in the last they got two on hits by Bowman, Reilly and Kelly's three-bagger. They had a good bunch of hard luck handed out to them, but they could not stand for the terrific bombardment of the Statesmen. The score:

MADDEN'S DREAM

TRYING TO BOOST RUHLIN.

Billy Madden has had another pipe dream, and this time it takes the shape of claiming the heavyweight championship for Ruhlin if Jeffries does not sign for a go with him by July 1. As Jeffries has never avoided Ruhlin, but will take him on any time there is money in sight, Madden's bluff is amusing.

Ruhlin is not in the class at any stage of the game, and Jeffries will probably not waste a moment's time thinking about the subject. It is said to be understood, however, that they will come together this year and in this city if the signs are right.

PUGILIST BERNSTEIN HAS "WENT."

HIS DEPARTURE MOURNED BY TRAINER MICHAELSON.

Trainer and Wife Left Here Without a Dollar, While Fighter and Wife are Traveling Hence With Money in Their Clothes.

Joe Bernstein, the lightweight pugilist, who can neither conquer Solly Smith nor be conquered by him, has departed from the scene of his fourth indecisive battle with the gamy little Los Angeles bruiser.

Bernstein and wife took passage in a Pullman sleeper for San Francisco yesterday evening. His departure is described as having been somewhat secretive; at least, his intention to shake the dust of Los Angeles from his feet so soon was known to very few of the sporting fraternity.

One man who was surprised at the New York pugilist's hasty exit and who mourns his departure, is his late trainer, Michaelson. Michaelson mourns and will not be comforted, because he says Bernstein owes him $100.

Bernstein left with a well-filled wallet, having at least $800 or $900 in cash, which Michaelson helped him to earn by getting him in proper condition for his late battle, and Michaelson has nothing.

In short, Michaelson and wife are stranded and compelled to accept assistance from the Order of Eagles, of which he is a member, to tide over present necessities.

Much indignation was expressed in sporting circles last night over Bernstein's alleged desertion of his former Fidus Achates. So far as known the relations between Bernstein and his trainer were friendly up to the parting hour.

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Enthusiastic Audience at Y.M.C.A. Hall Last Night to Hear the Lyceum Debate—D. A. Schweitzer Victor.

The oratorical contest of the Y.M.C.A. debating lyceum took place in the auditorium last night before a large audience. The programme was as follows:

Piano solo, J. E. Lacy; oration, "Robert T. Ingersoll," William F. Lusk; "Under the Shadow of a Curse," Ernest Dawson; "A Century of Progress," P. D. D. Dixon; vocal solo, Miss Della M. Wheeler; "The World's Conquerors," T. J. Ashurst; "Success," D. P. Smythe; "Our Country," D. A. Schweitzer; piano solo, Miss Edith A. Schulenburg; "New Fields for the Practical Inventor," C. H. Bailey; "Youth," Oscar B. Smith; vocal solo, Mrs. Della M. Wheeler.

The judges were Dr. E. S. Chapman Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker and Rev. Joseph Smale. After twenty-minutes' deliberation, they rendered their decision in favor of D. A. Schweitzer for his oration on "Our Country."

TEACHERS "RESOLOOT."

Exchange of Ideas for Mutual Benefit and for Edification of Members of Board of Education.

Quite a large number of public school teachers attended the meeting of the Teachers' Association of Los Angeles at the Chamber of Commerce last evening. There were also present, by invitation, members of the Board of Education and of the Schoolmasters' Club. The meeting was called for the discussion of several resolutions, that the teachers may benefit by an exchange of ideas.

The Board of Education will soon have to make out the yearly course of study for the various grades, and the teachers desire that the members shall know their ideas as to the teaching of various subjects in different grades.

The first subject brought up is contained in the following, which, after considerable discussion, was adopted: "Resolved, that the principal of a building shall have full control over special, as well as regular, teachers at all times while in the building."

"Resolved, that reading, spelling, writing, language and arithmetic are of the greatest importance to all children who leave school before entering the fifth grade, and shall be taught to the exclusion of other branches, if necessary," was the second question discussed. It called forth considerable argument, and upon vote, the first clause was adopted. The latter part—"and shall be taught to the exclusion of other branches, if necessary," was rejected.

The following resolution: "Resolved, that numbers shall be taught in the second grade rather than color," was amended by the following: "Resolved, that concrete number work shall be placed in the first and second grades." The amendment was lost, after an exhaustive discussion.

The Superintendent of Schools took an active part in the discussion. The members of the Board of Education present were Messrs. Simonton, Henry and Horgan.

An Appeal to Save the Park.

LOS ANGELES, June 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have noted with pleasure the prospect of a library building for Los Angeles. But is there not in all this large and widely-scattered city any place to choose from but the pretty little Central Park? A place already made beautiful by its fine trees, choice shrubs and lovely flowers; a breathing place for the city; a place where little children can play, with their guardians and nurses. We need more such places, and as the city grows larger its people will cry out for them, and the men of today, who lay desecrating hands upon that "Temple of God" to raise therein a building of wood and stone, even if it be for the better instructing of the people, will be a scorn to those who come after them.

If it is desirable to locate the library in that vicinity (and there is none better) why not secure the northwest corner of Hill and Fifth streets, which I have noted for sale for some time. The building may thus have two entrances. The principal one, facing our pretty Central Park, where the patrons of the library, after securing their books, could withdraw to read them, thus making the park an adjunct to the library. I wish the site of Hazard's Pavilion might be secured for a library, and then such disgusting exhibitions could not be presented there as last night's prize fight, where, in passing on the car, I saw crowds of young boys, gathering on foot and bicycle. Another fine site would be at the southwest corner of Olive and Fifth streets, still facing Central Park, near the Normal School. Where could be a more fitting place?

Destroy our parks? Never! I say, give us more parks, out of town, for those who can walk or drive, but in the city for those who need the cheer of the blessed trees, flowers, and, above all, the beautiful grass, sweet and cool for the little feet, humanising and uplifting for all, telling of God's tender care for each one of us, if we only lift our faces to Him day and night as do the grass, the trees and flowers.

Even if there be no legal objection to taking the park for a library site, there certainly is a moral objection.

LOS ANGELES, June 18, 1901.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In your report of the laying of the corner-stone of St. Joseph's Catholic Church last Sunday, I notice the following:

"In the year of our Lord on the 16th day of June, 1901, and the glorious reign of Pope Leo XIII, William McKinley, being President of the United States; Patrick William Riordan being archbishop of San Francisco, Cal.; George Montgomery being bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, Cal.; Very Rev. Father Hugolinus Storff, O.F.M., being superior provincial of the Sacred Heart province; Very Rev. Father Theodore Arentz being commissary of the Franciscan of the Commissariate of California and Arizona; Rev. Father Victor being rector, and Rev. Father Vitalis being assistant rector of the Church of St. Joseph in the city of Los Angeled, Cal.; Meredith P. Snyder being Mayor of the city of Los Angeles, Cal."

The report states that a manuscript bearing the foregoing inscription was placed in the corner-stone as a reminder to future generations who were the men in authority when the corner-stone was laid. It will be observed that AMERICAN CHEESE. The increased demand for fancy cheese of foreign type and manufacture has spurred American cheese makers on to great activity, says the New York Sun. For years the so-called "Yankee" cheese, a green and mealy, bald full cheese, like the Edam, the Limburger and the pineapple cheeses, all product of the Middle West, being its only rivals in popularity. The American palate has, after a while to turn toward these and away from the imported cheeses. It became immensely popular. The American quickly noticed this, and in a little while the best of Brie cheese, the Neuchatel and Camembert cheeses were products of the United States. The retail trade, imagining that imported goods are better than domestic article, demanded that the home product be stamped "Made in America," or in such country as was most appropriate.

And so far has this been carried that American-made cheese stamped "French manufacture" was sent to the last Paris Exposition, entered in the French section as a domestic product, and received all the first prizes for the French article. The French cheesemakers do not as yet know of this deception practiced upon them. But it has been impossible to make it entirely satisfactory Roquefort cheese in this country. The lemon market is completely demoralized on both California and Sicilian stock. California lemons are arriving in very poor order, and are meeting with a light demand. A great deal of the Sicily stock is of ordinary quality. Up to the present time we have had no lemon weather, and stocks have accumulated.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—Opening prices of stocks were at the highest average level of the day, and all rallies, of which there were several, of some slight force, were met by renewed selling which drove prices downward. After the opening spurt, there were developments of strength here and there in individual stocks, but they were a class of securities that usually have little prominence in the trading, and were without sympathetic influence on the price. The drop from the opening high level was considerable, but the selling pressure showed a tendency to diminish when prices got down to about last night's level. In fact, there was no severe pressure to sell at any time, and the market reflected rather the disposition of the class of large speculators to refrain from operations and let the market lie fallow during the period of disregarding the the capacity of the money market to afford resources for speculation between now and the turn of the half-year ending period. The volume of dealings showed a notable shrinkage and fell below the half-million share mark, which is the lowest level touched since the Presidential election. Even this meager aggregate was largely dependent on the congested dealings in a few stocks, notably Amalgamated Copper. This stock was under pressure all day, and fell an extreme 3% under last night, with a final rally of two points on the declaration of the customary 1½ per cent. quarterly dividend and ½ per cent. extra. This selling is said to be in large part due to arbitrage operations against buying of stocks eligible for exchange. Colorado Fuel continued its sensational fluctuating, falling at one time 6 points under last night and 28½ under the high price of Monday, but rallying at the last to a point above last night. General Electric was bought on the reported acquisition of the Brill-Thompson-Houston Company, and the stock being in very light supply, the buying lifted it 15 points by wide jumps. There was persistent strength in Minneapolis and St. Louis and the Iowa Central stocks, which rose 4 to 4¼ on rumors of a merger and final absorption by the Illinois Central. The strength of Chicago Great Western was based on a feeling that the settlement of the western Railroad situation will necessitate its control. The early strength of the market in sympathy with London was clearly due to the improvement there of the monetary situation where the government is making haste to reimburse the sources of Tuesday's instalments of control subscriptions. Doubts continue over the local money situation. The subtreasury has already taken from the market $2,386,000, which includes the payments for the gold exported. The sale at auction at Washington today to satisfy a government lien of the Sioux City and Pacific Railway Company to the Chicago and Northwestern will involve the further payment to the government of nearly $2,000,000, although a period of twenty days is permitted. The rise in New York exchange at Chicago to 25 cents premium, 5 per thousand shows that the interior is responding to the pressure for funds at New York. The very heavy requirements incident to the unprecedented interest and dividend disbursements July 1, which must be met next week, admonish to continued caution an overstraining of the money market for speculative purposes. This and the subsidence of the talk regarding the St. Paul-Union Pacific deal sufficiently explain the dullness and heaviness of the speculation. The bond market was moderately active and irregular. Total sales, par value, $2,920,000. United States bonds all unchanged on the last call.

London Financial Market.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Commercial Advertiser's London financial cablegram says: "Speculation on the Stock Exchange here today was dull and prices declined from a lack of support. American stocks began the day strong under the leadership of St. Paul. Union Pacific and Reading, however was talked 129 on the Kansas crop report. The first half hour exhausted the buying demand, and at 2 o'clock the seller of St. Paul, the improvement was comparatively short-lived and there was a flat finish. Money continues easy with rates generally unchanged. The Bank of England has received £72,000 in gold bars, and has bought £29,000 in bullion. The banks of Bengal and Bombay have reduced the discount rate 1 per cent. to 5 per cent. Paris exchange is 25.22. Berlin unchanged."

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, June 20.—A momentary firmness prevailed in the wheat pit at the opening, occasioned by reports of a great scarcity of wheat in France, together with higher cables. Reports of good prospects for a heavy harvest, however, easily offset these bull features and caused a desire to sell for future deliveries. Holders of July were also anxious to liquidate, and the consequent decline in that month carried September down with it. The trading opened a shade higher at 68¾c, but dropped to 68½c on moderate commission-house selling, reacting on reports of damage in the Southwest, and the close was ¾c lower at 68¼c. In the face of the weakness in wheat, corn has shown decided strength, but the volume of trading was small. Light receipts at primary markets continue to be the principal bull influence, giving encouragement to holders even after taking into consideration the favorable growing weather and poor shipping demand. September closed unchanged. Oats were the chief attraction today. Commission houses were heavy buyers. September closed strong, ¾ to ⅞c higher at 29¾@29¾c. Provisions were dull and without any feature. There was no great pressure to sell, although an air of weakness seemed to prevail during the early part of the session. Firmness in corn doubtless influenced provisions, causing the strength in the latter half of the day. September pork closed strong, 2½ cents higher at $15. Lard closed unchanged, and ribs closed 2½ cents higher.

The leading futures closed as follows:

New York Metal Market.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Metals—Tin, both at New York and London, obtained a higher level today. A decrease in stocks due to the sinking of the steamer Asturia with 550 tons and sympathy with the firmness abroad, caused the prevalent strength here, and prices before the close showed a rise of about fifty points, closing firm in tone at 25.70; in London, spot tin advanced 10s to £126, and futures up 15s to £123 15s, with the final tone firm. Locally the copper market was featureless, and nominally at 17 for Lake Superior and 16¾ for casting and electrolytic, while at London weakness prevailed under liquidation and values were reduced 7s 6d, spot standing at £68 15s and futures at £69 2s 6d. There was no change reported in pig lead at New York or in London. Spelter was also unchanged. Domestic iron markets ruled full and unchanged. English markets were dull. Glasgow warrants closing at 55s 4d and Middlesboro at 44s 6d.

PRESENT OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUNG MEN.

I.—TEACHING AS A CAREER.

[By Charles de Garmo, professor of the science and art of education, Cornell University.]

WHEN a young man begins to deliberate upon his future career a number of perplexing problems confront him. Questions of congeniality, competition and compensation arise. One calling is contrasted with another. All professions seem overcrowded, so that competition is fierce and compensation correspondingly meager.

Every man, however, must do something; some sort of a decision must be made. It is the part of wisdom, therefore, for each to look over the whole field before deciding; then after the decision is made to apply all the energy and courage of youth in achieving a solid and permanent success.

It is the purpose of this article to reveal as clearly as may be the range of opportunities open to ambitious teachers; the competition that must be met; the compensation that may be expected; the service to mankind that may be rendered; the enjoyments and immunities of teachers and finally the effect of the teaching career upon the minds and hearts of those who do the work.

THE CONSTRUCTIVE NATURE OF TEACHING.

The first thing that strikes one in comparing education with other professions is its positive or constructive nature. Medicine, law and theology are alike in the fact that each strives to repair something that is out of order. The physician strives to mend the broken body, to restore it to the normal condition of health. The lawyer endeavors to mend the broken law, to make peace among contending neighbors, to render just that which was before unjust, to make equity take the place of injustice. The preacher tries to mend the broken life or sooth the broken heart, to bring sinful men to peace before their Creator. All these professions are, therefore, in large measure remedial; but education is constructive. It takes the child of healthy mind and body and strives to promote the natural growth of both. Teaching simply furthers the natural evolution of the boy or girl; the other professions named simply check degeneration by applying remedies for that which is going wrong. Education promotes development; law, medicine and theology correct disorders.

The mental tendencies promoted by these various callings present striking differences. The lawyer's mind becomes more and more alert, and discriminating, not to say combatative, since he must always match his powers against those of an opponent. The physician, from his constant association with the sick, tends to pessimistic views, and not unfrequently becomes morbid and unsocial. The preacher, always yearning over the souls of his parish, is prone to become abnormal in his views of life. But the poor schoolmaster is not much better off. While doctors and preachers are dealing with the sick and sinful, he is dealing with the immature. His higher intellectual powers are in danger of atrophy for lack of use. The dogmatism of the schoolmaster is proverbial. Again, the easy victories of the superintendent, whose soldiers are women and whose battlefield is the schoolroom, do not conduce to such virility as that produced by a more strenuous life. Yet, with all these professions the evils that threaten do not always ensue. Who does not know lawyers who are humane, social men; or ministers who take all experience for their field; of physicians whose minds are as wholesome as if they never visited the sick-room; or teachers who are men of affairs, as great outside as inside the schoolroom?

COMPETITION OF WOMEN TEACHERS.

Men do not fear the competition of other men, but they may well fear that of women of education. Among men of a given grade of culture, responsibilities and standards of living are essentially the same; but just as the American workman naturally dreads the competition of another race, say the Chinese, whose standard of living is on a much lower plane, so a man to whom it is natural to found and support a family dreads the competition o. a woman who does not found a family, and who at best but helps to support the remnants of one already founded. Relieved of these heaviest responsibilities of life, a woman can and does teach for a third of what is absolutely essential to a man.

Once the whole business of education was in the hands of men; now it is steadily slipping away from them. In Massachusetts but 5 per cent. of all public school teachers, elementary and secondary included, are men. One may safely assert that with the exception of superintendents, and, in cities a few grammar school teachers, the whole of elementary education is in the hands of women. The tendency in secondary education, in all but the largest cities, is in the same direction. In New York State two-thirds of all high school teachers are women. This rapid increase in the employment of women works against men in three ways. It decreases the number of positions open to them, and it tends to make their salaries smaller and their tenure of office more uncertain.

SALARIES OF MEN TEACHERS.

It is undoubtedly true that a few salaries of public school men in each State are higher than they ever were before, but the number of prizes of that sort is painfully small compared with the whole number of male teachers.

In choosing a career, a young man always comes sooner or later to these questions: Is there a living in it? What are its money possibilities? What chance have I to draw one of its prizes?

It is important to know not only the maximum salaries possible, but also how many choice positions there are.

The following table, compiled from Valle's Directories, gives this information concerning principals and superintendents for public schools in five leading States:

	Ill.	Ind.	Wis.	Mich.	N. Y.
1—$2'00 upward	23	2	1	3	41
2—$2000 to $2500	135	12	8	18	53
3—$1500 to $1800	252	118	218	157	467
4—Below $1500	126	754	405	418	703

Of the twenty-three higher salaries for men in Illinois all but one are paid in Chicago, while thirty-four of the forty-one higher salaries in New York State are paid in Greater New York.

It will be seen, moreover, that more than two-thirds of all the male principals and superintendents of these States are teaching for less than $1000 a year, or for a sum too small for the support of a family; also that the number of places paying $2000 and upward is very small. In these five States over 25,000 men are teaching. The average monthly salary is probably about $50. It is safe to say that no other learned profession, unless perhaps the ministry, has so few money prizes as teaching in the public schools. Only 62-3 per cent. of the whole number receive as much as $1000 a year.

CHANCE FOR A PROFESSORSHIP.

For those ambitious to accumulate wealth, or even to have a reasonable assurance of comfort through life, public school education does not hold out flattering prospects. Private education is largely undermined by the rapid development of the public high school, so that this field is restricted in the number of desirable places it can offer. A few positions are annually open in the normal schools at from $1000 to $2000 a year. Then, of course, there is the professorship in college and university. This is always a position of great attractiveness, especially where there is endowment enough for the institution to make salary high and tenure secure.

But the road to a university is long and rocky. Mere graduation with the bachelor's degree no longer suffices. One must spend three or more years in graduate study. Then begins the painful search for an opening. When this is found the candidate must usually serve for years at a nominal salary. But the goal once attained, few positions in life are superior in opportunities for usefulness or are more conducive to solid satisfaction.

PREPARATION FOR SUCCESSFUL TEACHING.

The preparation now demanded of successful school men is much more extended than it was formerly. For example, normal school training alone no longer suffices to make men eligible to the best places. They must have at least college or university education. This is due to the fact that the universities and colleges annually graduate thousands of young men and women who compete for teachers' positions; also to the further fact that the normal school has restricted its function to the preparation of teachers for the elementary schools, hence chiefly to the training of women. Men have almost ceased to attend New England normal schools, while they are rapidly diminishing in others. Moreover, the tendency in these schools is to restrict the course of study to elementary subjects and to shorten it to one or two years. All these influences make it imperative for men graduating from normal schools to continue their education in the university, unless they are to be hopelessly handicapped in the competition for place.

Not only must the young man hoping to be a successful teacher have an extended academic training, but he should have also a good professional training as well. The latter can be well begun in the university courses in the science and art of education. Such courses do not impart teaching skill directly, but they make the student intelligent on educational questions. They show him what the important problems are and give him some idea of how they can be solved.

CHANCES FOR NEW METHODS.

The most useful auxiliary studies are those in social and political science, on the one hand, and those in psychology, on the other. The former show the aims of education; the latter show the best means for reaching these aims.

The opportunity for the useful transformation of our education was never better than now. Our current educational ideals come chiefly from two sources, neither of which is adequate to present needs. One set of ideals come from our primitive lower life; the other set comes from the aristocratic schools of England. Primitive life gave the boys and girls a vigorous motor training through the work of farm and household; the elementary school gave them an intellectual counterpart through its drill in spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic and grammar. The tongue and the forefinger were about the only motor organisms that were exercised in school. On the other hand, our concepts of the scholar were derived from the Latin, Greek and mathematics of the aristocratic boys' schools in England, such as Eton, Harrow, Rugby and Winchester.

The schoolmaster has now to confront two sets of facts. First, that city life no longer gives any motor training to the children, while the school is for the most part doing only the things it did in the old pioneer days. Whenever it attempts to depart from its ancient course men like Prof. Briggs of Harvard protest in the name of all that's old. Second, the classical tongues are no longer the means for getting and expressing ideas, hence they can no longer properly retain their ancient functions; furthermore, as a counterpart of this fact, we have the rise and development of new departments of knowledge, such as the modern languages, the natural sciences and the historical and social sciences.

NOBLE WORK TO BE DONE.

In view of the foregoing considerations, it may be seen that the school men of the future have a double transformation to effect. They must make the school restore the motor training lost by society, and they must effect a proper balance between the old subjects and the new.

Many a school man of the past has attained an undying fame in the attempt to solve simpler problems. Rousseau tried to eliminate society from education; Pestolozzi began the work of educating all children; Herbart systematized teaching; Herbert Spencer pleaded for the recognition of science in the school; Froebel strove to establish a development theory of education, even before the days of practical evolution. The school man of the future has glorious ends to work for. All the work of the past must be done over again, for the conditions of life have been revolutionized in passing from a pioneer to an urban civilization. If the men of the past have endured indifference and opposition, and have eaten with joy the crust of indigence, may we not expect that the school man of the future, who is at least assured of a living and whose slightest contribution is accorded more praise than it deserves, will bear with fortitude the few hardships which may be his, that he may work at a noble structure, that he may contribute something at least to the elevation of a great people?

HOW TO TRANSFORM SCHOOLS.

So long as education remains in its passive stage, so long as the pupil is a mere recipient of the knowledge poured over him, women might just as well do all the teaching. It is not worth while to spoil an active director of a factory to make a passive master of a school. As a matter of fact, it is mostly quiet-loving men who go into teaching. If not passive by nature, they become so by practice. It is this fact that leads Mr. Ward in his "Dynamic Sociology" to declare that the schools are taught by "young girls and feeble men." It is not so much feebleness as passivity that ails our men teachers. We need a new set of ideals; we need a new set of men to carry them out. Schools must become the seat of outer as well as inner activity. Mere internal excitement among the convolutions of the brain no longer suffice, since these children must be fitted for life as they will find it. The whole spirit of the institution must change. This involves the education of the public, the education of the teachers and the transformation of the education of the children.

The man who wants a noble work to do and who is satisfied with a moderate pecuniary reward can find in teaching an occupation that can be made to satisfy the loftiest ambition, and at the same time to suffuse life with the finest spiritual rewards that come to men.

THE TIMES' DAILY STORY

MAN HUNTING.

BY WALTER H. FARLEIGH.

[Published under special arrangement with the S. S. McClure Co., New York.]

THE English government had been appealed to by Russia to make England too hot to hold the Nihilists, who were hatching plots against the life of the Czar, and Detective Frazer had been employed to take the preliminary steps. He was to locate the "center" and spot the individuals comprising it, and when all was ready he would call for assistance and draw a full net.

Frazer was the right man in the right place. He was a human bloodhound by instinct. He was without mercy or pity for a criminal. He was ambitious, zealous and untiring. If any public officer in London could locate the bloodthirsty theorists who were causing the Czar so much anxiety it was Frazer. He was a man of wonderful intuition, and he was trained in the art of running down shadows till he found them, flesh and blood.

The government did not let it become publicly known that it was making a move against the refugee-conspirators, and Frazer took care that no one should know of his mission. He went on a still hunt for three months, and during that time he covered every district in London and became familiar with every suburb. Luck and intuition guided him aright. One night he called in the aid of the police and made a descent on a house, bagging eight of the men he wanted. The papers did not call them Nihilists, but counterfeiters, for the papers were not told of the bombs, infernal machines and treasonable literature captured with them.

There were ten Nihilists in the group and Frazer had secured but eight of them. The eight were given up to Russia to become Siberian exiles, but the other two were left behind to avenge them. That they would seek his death Frazer fully realized, and prepared himself for the struggle. If they had to do with a crafty, aggressive man who knew no fear, he had to do with two cunning, vindictive men who had sworn to take his life and would dare everything to accomplish their object. Their identity was unknown to him, as they had been out of the country while he was working up his case, while it was more than probable that they knew him by sight. They also had the advantage of having friends among the criminal classes who would aid them in various ways.

Having concluded his labors for the English government, the English government wanted nothing more of Detective Frazer. Were it known that he had received orders from the Cabinet there was no telling what public building might be blown up in revenge. An infernal machine in the House of Parliament or a bomb thrown through a window of Somerset House would awaken all England in an hour, and questions might be asked that the government would find it embarrassing to answer.

While England and Russia have long been on the most friendly terms, there are plenty of Englishmen, and many of them people of influence, who sympathize with the struggle for freedom in Russia, and argue that the Czar's obstinacy has driven his subjects to adopt extreme measures. The government would have been glad to hear that Frazer was going off to Australia or America for a long vacation, and it so hinted, but he refused to go. He knew he had been marked down by the two Nihilists, and pride prevented him from running away. While they hunted for him he would hunt for them. It should be a battle to the death.

He made an immediate move, and perhaps it was with a feeling of exultation that he discovered that the enemy was just as prompt. He was in a low dancehouse in disguise when the point of a knife thrust at his heart was buried in the memorandum book in his pocket, and the would-be assassin got away. Frazer was not injured, but his nerves were a bit shaken. In leaving the street behind him a brick, dropped from a third-story window, missed his head by an inch. The next day he called other officers to his aid and raided a house of doubtful character, but of all the persons pulled in none were detained beyond a day.

From that day on, for months and months, Frazer was hunting in London. He was never Frazer as his comrades knew him. He had a dozen different disguises, and if he was a "toft" one day, he was a costermonger the next. Here and there he picked up a clew, until it came to pass that he knew the lodgings of his foes and would have recognized their faces on the street. Then they suddenly disappeared, and within a week they had taken a leaf out of his book and adopted disguises. A seeming mendicant accosted him one day and sought to stab him in the back. As he walked the streets one night a bullet whizzed by his head. A box was left at his lodgings, which proved to be an infernal machine, and in the crowd at the entrance of a theater an attempt was made to assassinate him.

It was a game of life and death well played, but, though the detective realized that the odds were against him, he would not give up. He shifted his lodgings, had the press announce that he had left England, and went into the slums as an evangelist. After two weeks he spotted one of his men, but before he could make a move he was assaulted and laid up for a fortnight. He was traced to his new lodgings and a bomb was used to blow out the front of the house.

He was determined to give the Nihilists no rest until he had them in limbo, and on the other hand a new "center" appeared and solemn oaths were taken to run Frazer to his death before carrying out any other work. He was warned by anonymous letters of what was being done and what was inevitable unless he drew off, but each new development only made him the more determined. He felt now that it was a losing game on his side, but he would continue to play it to the end.

In four months Frazer shifted his lodgings seven times. During the same time he shot and wounded two men who had sought to corner him, and he arrested eight or ten suspicious characters. A man who had entered his lodgings at midnight was almost killed by a blow from a club, and another, who was surprised in the act of throwing a bomb through the window, was flung into the gutter and had his leg broken. At his last shift of lodgings, Frazer moved clear across London and assumed the disguise of a tramp. For a week he heard nothing from his foes, but if they had dropped him, he had not done with them. He had subordinates who were picking up threads for him as he rested. One afternoon as he sat in a small park after having solicited alms in his disguise, a middle-aged man of the dress and bearing of a clergyman turned in from the street and sat down beside him. At first the detective rose up in an excited way, as if to flee; then he sat down and seemed perfectly helpless. His face grew pale, his eyes dilated, and though he made an effort to speak, his words stuck in his throat.

All this was witnessed by two other strollers in the vicinity. A nursegirl who was wheeling a child up and down the walk said that his lips were blue and his chin quivering. She heard the supposed clergyman address him several times, but there was no answer. The sun was shining, the people about him were laughing, and it was a summer's day, but the disguised detective shook and shuddered. It could only be said afterward that the chill of death was upon him, and that his nervous system had been suddenly upset by the unexpected appearance of one of his foes.

By and by the clergyman went away and left Frazer sitting there bolt upright, his hands clasped and his eyes staring into vacancy. It was ten minutes before a policeman came along and had his attention attracted by the pallor of the man's face. He laid his hand on the tramp's shoulder and asked if he were ill, and the body toppled over sideways on the bench. The disguised Frazer had been stabbed to the heart by a small dagger in the hands of the clergyman, and the man who had been marked down had been removed at last. What was called "The Park Mystery" created a good deal of talk and wonder, and it was announced that the best talent of Scotland Yard had been put on the case. No arrests were ever made, however, and to this day it is a mystery to the English public why the murder should have been committed.

ONLY 5 CENTS.

ON THE HOME STRETCH.

All Eyes Open—There is no Time Now for Napping.

The 6-months' contest for Times prizes is drawing to a close. It will end June 30, 1901.

During the concluding 30 days no new competitors will be permitted to enter. The fight will be restricted to the veterans already in the field.

Only those who on June 30 have to their credit as many as 100 subscriptions in months will be entitled to prizes.

There are now 48 contestants with that many subscriptions, or more.

Each will receive at least two prizes, and several of them more—for work in different classes.

In value, the combined prizes of the first ten contestants will aggregate over $10,000.

They have turned in, so far, 102,997 subscriptions, a good proportion of them new, upon which they have already been paid commissions in cash.

In addition to the persons whose names are given below, there are about a dozen others enrolled who have not yet secured as many as 100 subscriptions.

As fast as these increase the number of their credits to 100 their names will be added to the printed list, and they will become eligible for prizes.

Otherwise the printed list will not be changed again till toward the close of the contest. This is for the purpose of shrouding it in a little wholesome mystery and increasing the "guessing."

No person will be allowed any advantage over another in the way of private information, but each will be obliged to do his best if he would maintain or better his standing.

There will doubtless be some surprises.

MEAT WAGON RUNAWAY.

POMONA, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] A lively runaway occurred here early this morning, when a team of horses attached to a heavy meat wagon started in front of George Weigle's market on Main street and ran west on Second street. Nothing was struck until the European Hotel was reached, when the team crashed into the posts supporting the veranda of the building. Four of these were completely knocked down, and the whole roof came tumbling to the sidewalk, the guests in the front part of the hotel thinking an earthquake had visited them. Both horses were caught in the mix-up, and the wagon was not much damaged, but pieces of meat were well scattered along the street.

Tuna Return to Avalon Bay in Force. Golfers Arriving—Champion Jeffries on Deck—Island Gems—Santa Catalina News Notes.

AVALON, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] The Isthmus is blossoming out as a full-fledged resort. The Barracks, which was used as a nucleus for the hotel, contains a spacious dining-room, capable of seating 175 people, and a parlor or general sitting-room, amply large for their social accommodation. The Swanfeldt tents, of which there are 125 erected, will suffice as cottages, as they are furnished similarly to the ordinary hotel rooms. Sportsmen Fishermen Looking Forward to a Great Season With Plenty of Big Catches—Interest Shown in Special Bait and Tackle.

LONG BEACH, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] Those who take an interest in fishing as a sport are looking forward to a big season in the waters of the Catalina Channel off Long Beach, San Pedro and Avalon. The recent captures of swordfish and maneating sharks off San Pedro, the famous taking of tuna off Catalina Island and the great schools of tuna recently seen not far from Long Beach are looked upon as indications of a period of big catches for the sportsmen fishermen.

No tuna have been caught off Long Beach this summer, for no one has made a scientific pursuit of them near this beach resort, but many of the gamy fellows have been seen from boats plying the waters in search of fish for food instead of sport. The tuna have been observed within three miles of the Long Beach pier leaping above the surface and cavorting about excitedly. Many flying fish, the favorite bait for tuna, have also been seen in the same waters.

Hitherto there have been few fishermen about Long Beach so much interested in the sporting features of the pursuit of the finny tribe as to procure the particular kinds of tackle and bait needed for the successful pursuit of the tuna and other gamy fish of the neighboring waters, but the interest shown in this direction is increasing. The presence of the tuna has stimulated the idea of fishing for sport and some famous captures are looked for in the course of the coming season.

SAN PEDRO.

SWORDFISH TAKEN.

SAN PEDRO, June 20.—[From The Times' Correspondent.] The capture of a swordfish by J. A. Swanson Tuesday was followed by the taking of another which is believed to have been even larger by John Falcone, Wednesday. Falcone caught the marine monster in his nets ten miles off Portuguese Bend. It was so big that it was not safe to take it aboard the boat and as it would have been a very slow operation to tow the fish to port Falcone turned it loose.

There was a song by a chorus of Whittier children, a scripture contest by little boys and girls, and vocal solos by Nellie Crist and Gussie Coryell.

WHITTIER BREVITIES.

Maj. Madison T. Owens has filed with the City Council an opinion concerning the little park on the corner of Washington avenue and Philadelphia street. When the town was laid out by the Pickering Land and Water Company the three lots in question were made into a park by the planting of trees and shrubbery, and cared for by the company. Recently the trustees became convinced that the park was public property, and Maj. Owens was commissioned to investigate the title. His opinion opposes the idea, as he finds no record of any acceptance of the park as such by the municipal government.

City Clerk Butler today sent to the Secretary of State an abstract of the vote cast at the recent special election called for the purpose of disincorporating the eastern half of the county road. It will now be necessary for the residents of the road district to file a petition with the County Supervisors for the straightening of the highway, as the city can take no further action in the matter.

ELSINORE.

GRADUATING EXERCISES.

ELSINORE, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] Graduating exercises were held last week in Bank Hall, which was nicely decorated for the occasion, Miss Katherine McIntyre was the only graduate. In her oration, entitled, "Laguna," she related the history of Elsinore Valley. Sixty years ago, she said, this valley was simply a vast pasture. She told how Auguste Michado first settled on Laguna Rancho, the old adobe house where he lived in true Mexican style, still standing. The first American settlers to invade this southern Arcadia were Messrs. Graham, Heald and Collier, who, on December 24, 1884, laid out the little town of Elsinore. Miss McIntyre reviewed the progress of the valley up to the present time, relating it in a pleasant manner.

Music was furnished by the High School girls and the Elsinore Mandolin Club. Miss Isabel Curl of Riverside rendered the following: "Bird of the Mountain" (Hubbard;) "Merry, Merry Lark" (Nevin;) "The Day Dream" (Streleski;) "The Nightingale and the Rose" (Hawley.)

A. A. Adair of Riverside read an essay on 'Success in Life,'' in which he denied the prevailing idea that a hymn-singing, pious youth is no good in a scrap, and that he thought the way to win the laurel wreath of fame was by following divine teaching. Mr. Adair presented a diploma to the graduate.

ELSINORE BREVITIES.

Charles Langstaff and family, who have been in Whittier the past year, have returned to their home in Elsinore.

Miss Colegrove has been re-engaged for the ensuing year, and Mr. Fanning, the principal, and his wife, who have taught in the advanced grades during the past year, will also remain, unless they decide to pursue an advanced course of study at Berkeley, or elsewhere.

The combined harvester of Messrs. Glasscock, Daniels and Moores is preparing for two months' work on the smaller ranches in this end of Fernando Valley.

AMERICAN PRESS BARRED.

Correspondents to Be Excluded from All Big Public Functions in London—Motive Said to Be Revenge.

[Special Cable, Philadelphia North American:] American newspaper men in London have a big sensation of their very own tonight.

Mr. A. Beckett, president of the Institute of Journalists, announces that emphatic instructions will shortly be given the Lord Chamberlain and the chief of police to issue to American correspondents no passes for public functions unless the applicants hold membership in the institute.

The affairs from which so many American writers will be barred include all those participated in by the royal family, Parliament and the Lord Mayor. The restriction will even keep the correspondents outside the lines during great processions, as well as from seats in official stands.

OUTCOME OF COWES INCIDENTS.

This new and drastic order is said to be the outcome of the alleged unseemly behavior of certain American reporters at Cowes at the time of Queen Victoria's death.

It will be remembered that a number of American newspaper men, the moment her Majesty's death was announced, rushed in great haste to the wires to get the news to their papers. The English reporters proceeded in more leisurely fashion, with dignified mien and bowed heads, until they got out of sight of the royal household officials. Then they gave a splendid exhibition of legging, without any dignity whatever.

Their hypocrisy when within the visional range of royalty's menials, however, caused them to be badly beaten.

The American energy and good news instinct and training got the news to certain London papers as well as to their own journals in the States. The "beat" rankled, especially as some of the dignified Englishmen were disciplined, it is alleged, by their editors-in-chief.

REVENGE OF THE BEATEN.

Revenge was sought in the prompt effort to bring American newspaper men and methods into ill repute. That was not enough, though, and there are those in London tonight, who charge the Institute of Journalism with inviting the official order.

Many well-known American correspondents have refused to join the institute, believing that, like so many other alleged associations of journalists, it does not represent the active working element of daily journalism. Mr. Beckett, the president of the institute, is the editor of Punch.

American newspaper correspondents generally may take action.

PUEBLO POTTERY.

Indian Relics of Many Sorts Shown in the Ethnology Building of the Pan-American Exposition.

[Exposition Circular:] A fine lot of Pueblo pottery and relics of different sorts is shown in the Ethnology building of the Pan-American Exposition. The Pueblos, who were dwellers in the plains and in the cliffs as well, are one of the most interesting, from an archaeological point of view, of all prehistoric people. Their civilization was remarkable, and their ingenuity in pottery making, basket weaving, bead work and many other things, very great.

They had many—peculiar customs, ceremonies and symbolic rites, and their pottery is ornamented with figures the significance of which puzzles the novice and expert alike. One of their peculiar symbols was a broken, instead of a continuous line drawn about a bowl or other dish, suggesting perhaps the finite character of life. A bowl shown in the exhibit of Pueblo pottery has the reproduction of two feet upon the bottom of it, inside, suggesting possibly the transitory and insignificant character of terrestrial existence.

Fine specimens of the famous "black and white ware" are shown, as well as the "red ware," most of which is black on the inside. A number of specimens finished so as to give the outside a corrugated appearance, are shown.

Many ingenious fine tools, finished stone implements, ornamental trinkets, presumably having religious significance, are on exhibition in the cases.

The basket work of Indians is very wonderful. Baskets made by comparatively modern Indians are shown. Water-tight baskets in large numbers and in many varieties are seen in the exhibit. All are ornamented with figures woven in when the basket was made.

The Pima Indians are those most famous for basket making. They even used baskets for cooking utensils, covering them with a thin layer of clay to keep them from being destroyed by contact with the fire.

Great is the Oyster.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] The most extensive of all the commercial fisheries is the oyster, whose crop amounts to about $15,000,000 a year. It grows in the brackish waters of the sea from Massachusetts to Texas on the Atlantic Coast and along the entire coast of the Pacific, although it is not cultivated to any extent on Long Island Sound. There are eight varieties of oysters, each having its particular flavor and habits and thriving under different conditions.

CUCAMONGA, June 20.—[From The Times' Resident Correspondent.] At 1 o'clock Thursday morning the building and general merchandise stock of W. W. Minor of Cucamonga were totally destroyed by fire. The stock was valued at not less than $4000 and covered by $2500 insurance. The building, owned by D. R. Kilbourne and but recently erected, was valued at $1000; no insurance. A cottage adjoining, owned by Mr. Kilbourne, and until two weeks ago occupied by Postmaster Oak, was also burned. There was no insurance on this. The origin of the fire is unknown, but there is suspicion that it was the work of an incendiary.

DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

Nat Firman Said to Have Left the City—Shortage in His Accounts Settled by Relatives.

Nat Firman, a clerk in the employ of the Postal Telegraph Company, has been found short in his accounts, and is said to have left for parts unknown. His shortage, which did not exceed a few hundred dollars, has been made up by relatives, and the matter has been kept very quiet, the telegraph company having no desire to prosecute the defaulting employé, even if found.

Firman is a veteran telegraph operator and is well known in Los Angeles, where he has resided for many years. He formerly worked at the key for the Western Union company, but several years ago went over to the postal, where he has been employed as a clerk behind the counter a good deal of money paid for messages thus passing through his hands.

He was of a genial disposition and had many friends. Although it was noted that he spent money rather freely for a man working on a moderate salary, his integrity was never questioned. Even now his defalcation is not attributed to dishonest intent, but rather to a stress of hard luck.

About a month ago Firman absented himself from his work on the pretext of illness. When he failed to show up after an absence of several weeks, his accounts were checked up, and found to be in bad shape. He never returned to straighten out the tangle, but a settlement was made with the company, on his behalf, by a gentleman who is related to him by marriage. The exact amount of the shortage has never been made public, but it is stated not to have been heavy.

Firman is well connected in Los Angeles and his trouble is greatly regretted by his friends. He is a man of about middle age, but is prematurely gray, which gives him the appearance of being much older than he really is.

FRICK IN NEW ROLE.

Pittsburgh Steel Magnate Will Collect Valuable Specimens for the Carnegie Museum on His Trip Abroad.

[BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, June 20.—Henry S. Frick has become interested in scientific projects through his son, and when he sailed on the Oceanic with his family, it was for a scientific object. In his new role he becomes a patron of the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh.

The plan which he is backing is to be carried out by his son, Childs Frick, 18 years of age, and Frederick S. Webster, head of the department of taxidermy of the Carnegie Museum, who also sailed on the Oceanic. Young Frick and Mr. Webster will remain abroad three months.

During the first two months they will visit noted museums in Europe, paying special attention to the British Museum in London and the Imperial Museum at Berlin, to secure new ideas to be put into practice at the Carnegie institution. The third month Childs Frick and Mr. Webster will spend in looking for game in Scotland. In the interests of the Carnegie Museum, H. C. Frick has secured hunting privileges in several of the best preserves in that country. There such specimens will be procured as cannot be found in the Pittsburgh Museum.
